Put these things in your

BEAUTY BOX

BEAUTY problems—that's the most engrossing subject for women, and many of the letters which come from readers are concerned with it.

What shall they do when on the beach? Some want to get brown; others wish to avoid it. They get sun scorched. Their noses shine. The glare hurts their eyes. Whether they are taking hiking or camping holidays, spending a week or so by the sea, or touring abroad, they all want to look their best.

By Elsie
Scott

One letter from a young girl sounded rather pathetic. "Last year I seemed to look all wrong by the sea," she wrote. "The other girls in the party had managed to get just the right shades of powder and make-up and I hadn't."

From that I gathered she had been completely overshadowed by her companions. Perhaps she had gone holiday-making looking too towmy.

White skins and blush rose cheeks do look strangely incongruous in swim suits. Too ethereal. The open air and outdoor sports call for something more robust. And so the question that crops up each summer has arisen again—to tan or not to tan? A certain amount of tan there should be, although the deep browns are out of fashion.

IVE been studying some of these tan-producers and they are of two kinds. The first is made to encourage a becoming tone without coarsening or damaging the skin. The second is for those who do not want to tan naturally at all, but who wish to look the part when engaged in outdoor activities.

One of the latter preparations is versatile, because you can control the exact depth of tone. A single application for a creamy beige. Two or more for a coppery colour. It is waterproof, so it won't come off when bathing. But it can be removed easily with a special cream, and there you are, beautifully fresh and while underneath it without a trace of tan.

AMONG the several handbags, made of soft calf leather. There are three bottles prepared for the summer of 1937 mirror with a little purse on a is an autumn leaf shade. In chain.

some clever way it seems to blend into a natural lip colour when applied. The cream rouge which goes with it looks very brown in the pot, but goes redder when it is on the cheeks.

One day I was discussing the new unpowdered complexion. It is having a certain vogue amongst the very young girls in America, who like to look as if their faces had been well scrubbed with soap and left shiny. It is not very popular here.

Whether you are a girl working in an office, or the mother of a family working in the home, there are things that should be packed in your Beauty Box to take with the holiday luggage.

You may be conservative about cosmetics, or crave for the very latest things out. It doesn't matter. You must have cleansing cream or lotion, foundation for powder, either liquid or cream or one like I tried recently in block form, which, by the way, is convenient for packing as it doesn't take up much room and can't get broken.

Be careful about the powder. Don't take away too pale a shade. After a day or so in the sun the skin will darken and, like the girl who wrote that letter, you won't look "right."

THERE should be deodorant powder, and a powder which can be sprinkled on the feet to prevent them from getting tired, burning and uncomfortable. In the beauty box you will want a little antiseptic, like iodine. "Buy this in 'penicil' form. Also, if you are going into the country or abroad, don't forget some preparation which will combat the onslaughts of mosquitoes.

An extremely simple remedy which will lessen the irritation if a mosquito or gnat has already attacked you is a lump of ordinary washing soda. Moisten the bite and rub it with the soda.

The medical part of the outfit I leave to you. But don't forget a small supply of your pet physics. A Beauty Box can be bought very cheaply. Rather attractive little containers in coloured enamel, holding two jars and two bottles. For a little more, there are three jars and three bottles and for the even more expensive you get three small manure-bottles included. These you fill with your own special creams and lotions.

Somewhere else I saw the most attractive leather boxes for a guinea. In the larger sizes this has a powder box as well as the usual three boxes and the same number of cream jars.

THE latest of all beauty-box designs is like a handbag, made of soft calf leather. There are three bottles prepared for the summer of 1937 mirror with a little purse on a is an autumn leaf shade. In chain.

"J. F. D."

"I have a purple birthmark, about the size of a two-shilling piece, at the side of my cheek. How can I get rid of it?"

MARKS of this description cannot be treated at home. You should apply to your local hospital as the removal of birthmarks must be undertaken by a medical man.

R. S. M.

"I am terribly keen to take up tap dancing this autumn, but a friend tells me that it is very exhausting and far too strenuous after a day's office work. Also that it enlarges the thigh muscles. Is this true?"

TAP DANCING is rather tiring at first, but it is harder on the ankles than on the thighs. You will find that your ankles ache until they get accustomed to the movements. But, as you only intend taking classes twice a week and as you are sitting all day in an office, you should not find it too tiring. And it is very good exercise.

It is always possible to miss a lesson if your day's work was particularly tiring.

"Fair and Forty"

"Will you tell me what shade of powder, lipstick and rouge to use?"

Don't Make
"Nerves"
An Excuse

SO many of us complain of "nerves" nowadays, and no wonder in these modern times, with all their stress and strain, buses roaring and electric drills throbbling, and everybody in a break-neck hustle.

Some women, however, make "nerves" an excuse for shirking duties or for covering what is often mere laziness or lack of self-control. For example, a tiring day in the house often ends in a display of bad temper at night, and that is put down to "nerves."

Some women complain that children "get on their nerves" and dread having the whole family home for the holidays, even if the family is a small one. They remind me of the days when our young family came home for the holidays. There were eight of us, and Mother welcomed all eight at once with a smile and a ham-and-plum-cake tea. It would never have occurred to her to make our holidays an excuse for complaining and "nerves." And Victorian children were not nearly so angelic or well-disciplined as we moderns imagine!

The people who work in a large city have perhaps more reason to complain of "nerves." But they, too, should remember how much their surroundings have improved in the last half-century. Modern buildings are scientifically ventilated and everything is planned hygienically. But not so many years ago offices were dark dens.

If the six o'clock rush hour is a strenuous, nerve-racking business, would you prefer the old two-hours journey back into the suburbs in a "jiggerty-joggerty" horse bus? "Nerves" when they are genuine are a terrible thing indeed, and sufferers from them need every care and sympathy, but there are far too many people complaining of their "nerves" who would do better to give themselves a good mental shaking and make up their minds to exercise a little self-control.

Mary Bridge

I have rather pale blue eyes, fair skin and fair hair, now turning 'mousy,' and—I'm forty."

ONE of the rules for make-up is to match the powder to the tone of the skin; lipstick and rouge should tone in with the natural colouring.

Some beauty salons use powder with a certain amount of pink in its composition, such as peach for fair skins inclined to be sallow, and rufous or natural for those with a reddish tendency.

You may use a rose lipstick or rouge or something less red, such as coral, if you prefer it. A rather less emphasised make-up is usually more becoming to those who have left the mid-thirties behind.

At night, make-up should be stronger and brighter.

YOURSELF
YOUR HOUSEJoan's
Table
Talk

IT is unfortunate, but true, that many women find their skins marred by open pores. Removing the cause is, of course, the first essential; rich foods, or sitting too long in a hot bath, are both "evils" which should be remedied.

As to the best treatment, cleansing the face with a lemon preparation, then rinsing in cold water, and patting the skin dry is generally satisfactory.

When enlarged pores appear by the side of the nose only, they should be cleansed at night with lemon cream, washed with a skin tonic, and a special cream rubbed into the open pores and left on all night.

Use tonic for the morning wash, patting the skin dry before making up in the usual way.

Points About Powder

THERE are still many women who choose the wrong powder for their type of skin, despite the fact that so many different textures in powders are now produced. Every skin is catered for.

A general rule is to use a well-sifted powder on a fine skin. Coarser powder clings to a coarser skin.

Any skin at all oily should be covered with a powder noted for its astringent powers. Such powders are, indeed, easier to obtain than powders which will not cake on a dry skin. Yet these powders are also prepared nowadays.

Tinted Kitchen Towels

BATHROOM towels, artistically coloured, are being bought to match the bathroom walls.

But, in the kitchen, new towels form a vivid contrast from the colours already in the room. Run-der towels made from Turkish towelling glow with orange, primrose or green.

Linen towels, also of the runner type, are checked in two or three colours in large or small sizes. Or they are gaily spotted.

White tea towels have bright borders. Squares of yellow or green are seen at either end.

Flowers On The Table

ONE can often pick up tips on how to decorate a table with flowers from the expert. A prize winning table at a recent exhibition showed a centre basket filled with well-spaced flowers in shades of yellow, and sprays of foliage extended across the cloth. At the corners of the table, small dishes held single flower heads.

Smaller, and simpler arrangements were also shown. For instance, single blossoms surrounded by leaves stood in small vases near each corner of a refectory table. In the centre a circular two-inch trough held a spray of flowers clipped by a special holder to one side. It was noticeable that dark flowers were put into black vases while pale flowers stood in crystal containers.

For Golfers

JEWELLERY is specialised these days. At least, some intriguing designs have been made for the golfer.

There are fancy wristlets in bright colours which have slots for tees.

For tee-holders are not quite so vivid because, apparently, tasteful choice is to have them to match one's suit. Green, scarlet and brown are usual colours.

A semi-circular piece of crystal with a round watch set in the centre is finished with a leather strap, and is, again, intended as a fob watch for a golfer.

Holds Beauty Requisites

EVERY woman who bathes likes to take her beauty outfit with her, and one very convenient solution is to make a hold-all to suit one's own special needs.

A strip of American cloth in a jaunty colour to match one's bathing suit or cape is just right for a roll-up hold-all. It should certainly be lined with oiled silk. Then pieces of the American cloth are sewn to make pockets inside to hold the little bottles of lotion, tins of cream, the cotton wool, hairpins and clips.

UNTHINKABLE!

Of course you would not give your baby a cigar or adult food because you know babies require special care and treatment. That is why you spend so much time in the preparation of his special food. Yet when baby's system is upset and he is troubled with colic, diarrhea, sour stomach, indigestion or constipation, are you careful to use only medicine that has been made especially for him? Castoria is the ideal remedy for your child because it has been prepared especially for infants and children. It is mild, pleasant-tasting and easy to take. The next time your baby is upset by some simple child ailment, use Castoria, safe for even the newborn infant.

DO YOUNG DOCTORS KNOW THEIR JOB?

'I Am Uneasy About Them

—B.M.A. President

Belfast, July 29.
 The newly qualified G.P.—the general practitioner whose business it is to cope with your ailments and mine—was criticised at the British Medical Association's conference here to-night.

Questions about his ability to practise immediately on qualifying were asked; doubts about his intentions to continue his studies were raised; and the new president, Professor R. J. Johnstone, the Belfast gynaecologist, himself said he was "uneasy" over the young doctor.

He suggested that a panel practice might be giving him an assured income too soon and taking away his incentive to study.

Said Professor Johnstone: "Some day we may see the medical practitioner going back to his old school, or to another school, for a month, for three months, even for a semester (seventh) year, both to learn and to teach."

"But leaving aside the difficult question of interference by one practitioner with the patients of another, there are still many administrative problems to be overcome before that can happen."

"With good will on both sides this should not be insoluble, but it will, I am afraid, be a long time before administrators may be brought to believe that a panel of doctors is just as efficient and reliable as, and gives no more trouble than, a whole-time officer."

"Perhaps in the future all difficulties will be solved by the establishment of a State medical service. Like good democrats we shall always oppose it."

"Every fresh instalment of social and public health legislation, every new chapter opened in the volume of State control, brings us steadily nearer to the totalitarianism to which we may say goodbye to the general practitioner as we know him."

"He is still with us, however, and how does he compare with his predecessor of a generation back?"

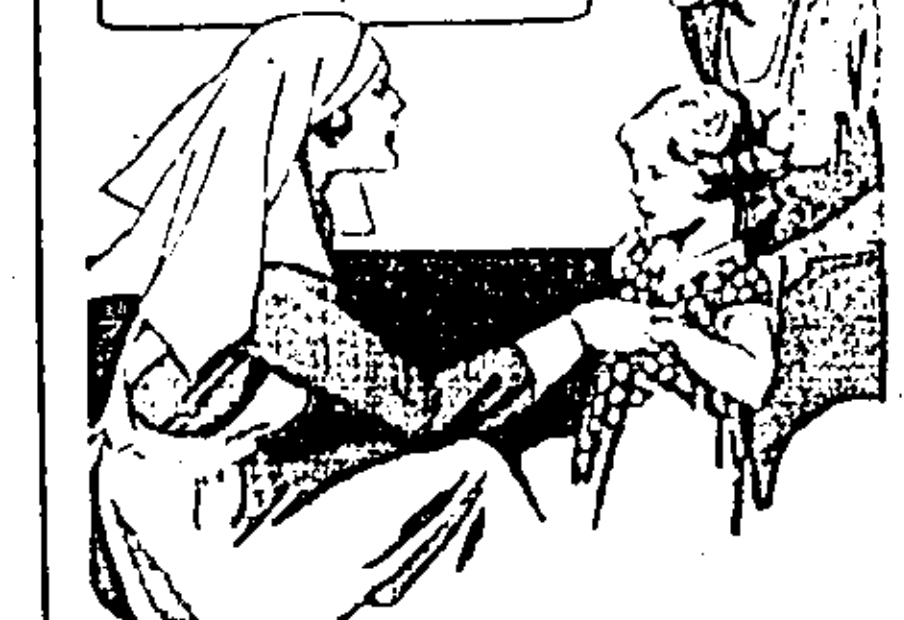

"His equipment is undoubtedly better, he has for the service of his patients a store of knowledge and an acquaintance with technical resources not even dreamed of when I was a medical student."

"But medical practice—and medical education—has its repellent side, even sordid and sometimes disgusting. I have no anxiety about our students."

"Their standard is as high as it ever was and they are getting and taking excellent training. But I do feel uneasy about the most important class in the profession, the young general practitioner in the twenties and the early thirties."

More criticism came from Dr. T. Craig, of Dudley when moving a resolution that no one passing his

"I'm worried about Winnie, nurse. She frets from morning till night. What do you advise?"

"Why, the poor little thing is constipated. No wonder she's fretful. That is the chief thing a mother has to guard against, Mrs. Grant."

"Kiddies don't understand; they're so absorbed in their games, and often neglect Nature's call. Then they get bilious, lose their appetite and become irritable."

"Show me your tongue, Winnie. Yes, it is coated—a sure sign she's out of sorts. All she needs is 'California Syrup of Figs,' and she'll be as happy as a lark in the morning."

"You'll find it keeps the bowels regular, purifies the system and saves stomach upsets and biliousness."

"If children are to thrive and grow strong and keen witted, they must eat well and digest what they eat. There's no better way than the regular weekly dose of 'California Syrup of Figs.' All children love it."

"If I were you, I would send for a bottle now and give Winnie a dose at once."

"Be sure you insist on 'California Syrup of Figs,' Mrs. Grant. I am surprised that some mothers are ready to experiment with cheap and drastic preparations. It's such a pity they don't realize that 'California Syrup of Figs' is a perfectly safe children's laxative. I know myself how carefully and scientifically it is prepared."

Padre Reveals Marvels Of Spiritual Healing

Bradford, July 22.

THE Rev. Leslie D. Weatherhead, minister of the City Temple, London, to-day held the Methodist Conference here spellbound as he described a series of cases of spiritual healing.

After saying that silent prayer was offered every night at the City Temple for particular individuals, he gave the following instances as the result:—

"Incurable" Cured.—A young airman lying in St. Bartholomew's Hospital had been told his disease was incurable and there was no hope. They prayed for him on a number of Sunday evenings. Now he was back at work.

Young Mother Recovers.—A young expectant mother who was paralysed in both legs was told she would never be able to move her legs again, and would be unable to give birth to her child, her first baby, alive. Within two or three hours of their prayers she was walking in the wards, and later her baby was safely born.

Sleep Restored.—A young nurse had a temperature of 104 degrees and was unable to sleep without drugs. They prayed for her without her knowing. Her temperature came down to normal. She slept all night and took nourishment the next morning.

Mr. Weatherhead said he could cite 20 more cases during the past six months in which people had not had the faintest idea that prayer had been offered for them.

"BLIND LIFTED"
 Among letters he had received testifying to the healing power of prayer was one from a woman who said she had been given up as hopelessly blind.

"At 7.30 last Sunday evening," ran the letter, "it was just as if a blind went up, and I saw and have continued to see."

"I might say," Mr. Weatherhead added, "that at 7.30 prayers were being lifted up by 2,500 people that the woman might recover."

CO-OPERATION
 Mr. Weatherhead was presenting the report of a committee on spiritual healing. This recommended that experiments should be made to discover if possible to what extent help could be given to persons in trouble by use of religious ministrations and psychology through doctors and ministers working in co-operation.

To carry out the recommendations another committee was appointed consisting of Sir Henry Brackenbury, vice-president, British Medical Association; Dr. Alfred Torrie, of Harley-street; Dr. W. F. Lofthouse, of Handsworth College; Dr. Eric S. Waterhouse, of Richmond College; the Rev. W. H. Beales, and Mr. Weatherhead.

Tell me, doctor... You know what children are—always falling and cutting their knees and grazing their hands. I don't regard such things as trifles: I had a young brother who died of blood-poisoning. Tell me, is there no efficient antiseptic I can apply at once with perfect confidence?

'Dettol' is such an antiseptic—dangerous only to germs. It is a clean, pleasant fluid—non-poisonous and non-staining—highly efficient as a germ-killer. You can apply it freely (there are directions on every bottle). Remember, the smallest break in the skin is a wide-open gateway for the germs of septic infection. Disinfect cuts and scratches at once with 'Dettol.' The way to prevent blood-poisoning is to kill the germs that cause it.

NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE

SWAN, CULBERTSON & FRITZ LATEST REPORTS

New York, Aug. 24.

S. C. & F. Dow Jones summary of to-day's markets: Trading to-day was light, although there was a moderate recovery attributed to the thinness of the market, as happened after Monday's decline. There were few outside incentives to trading. The Shanghai dollar has strengthened, with the banks seeking to replenish their funds in Shanghai branches, after the sudden withdrawal on Monday last. It is reported that considerable funds are ready for investment. Curb stocks were irregularly higher, while bonds, including United States Government issues, were irregular.

S. C. & F. New York office cables: Stocks: The market to-day is acting better, but the volume of business is light and leadership is lacking. Traders are inclined to be cautious and are more bullish for the long-pull than for a quick turn. We expect some further drift, but we would continue a policy of buying of good stocks on dips. Business failures for the week amounted to 159. Bank deposits for the week totalled $14,030,000,000.

Cotton: The demand from Washington of an early roundup of a 9-cent loan had been adopted caused short-covering, but the consensus of opinion eventually tended towards a loan on that basis. A favourable Government weekly report is expected to-morrow.

Wheat: There has been a moderate improvement in export demand for Manitoba wheat. There are reports of rain in the Argentine, the United States, Canada and Russia. Danubian wheat is reported to be offering freely. The Canadian visible supply is 30,000,000 bushels, as compared with 123,000,000 bushels last year. Purchase of May Winnipeg and sale of May Chicago are favoured by good authority.

Corn: The position is unchanged. Rubber: There is no worth-while factory interest and the steadiness of the market is largely due to short-covering.

Sugar: The market to-day experienced some tired long liquidation and stop-loss orders, which met with substantial Cuban covering on the scale-down. The fact that present certificates hold good only until August 31st, while the contract calls for delivery good until December 31st, may cause uneasiness on the part of shorts and some think that Cubans may take advantage of the situation later on.

Scoff At Casualty Report

Shanghai, Aug. 25.

The officially announced Japanese estimate of 100 soldiers killed during Monday's landing operations at Woosung is ridiculed by the Chinese, who claim that terrific loss of life among the Japanese was caused by the explosion of land mines.

The mines were set off under the feet of the marching men as they moved towards their objectives, the Chinese declare. The Chinese place the Japanese casualties at at least 6,000.

Meanwhile, in Shanghai itself naval and military experts continue their attempts to ascertain the source of the missile which wrecked the big departmental stores on Nanjing Road with such terrible loss of life and property. The police are rapidly clearing the littered streets for resumption of traffic.

The costly nature of the damage can be gauged from the fact that the plate glass destroyed in the Wing On store alone is worth over $100,000. The damage to Sincere's is at present beyond estimate. The Sun Sun Company also suffered severely.—Reuter.

HIT OVER THE HEAD

COMPENSATION IN ONE DOLLAR INSTALMENTS

How a woman's lies caused a man's skull to be fractured, was related at the Kowloon Magistracy yesterday when Chau Hok, 31, market foki, was charged before Mr. K. M. A. Barnett with causing grievous bodily harm to Yip Chu-chuen, 22, shop foki, by striking him on the head with a piece of firewood on July 27.

Mr. J. M. D'Almada Remedios appeared for Chau, and pleaded guilty. He asked for a lenient view to be taken as Chau had told him that he had been acting in self defence, Yip attacking him first with a bamboo pole. Chau had also been in custody for more than two weeks.

Detective Sergeant John Headridge said the complainant worked in a grocery shop in Argyle Street. About 5.40 p.m. on July 24, a woman came up and bought two cents worth of bean curd. She returned a few minutes later, saying the curd was bad, and demanded repayment. Yip, who was serving other customers, told her to wait until he had finished, but she reached across the counter and took two cents from the money box.

Comes Back with Husband

The foki asked her to show him what she had taken but she refused, whereupon he walked around the counter to the door of the shop towards her. She then struck him in the eye with a police whistle, and went away.

About 10 minutes later she came back with a man she said was her husband. This man said the woman had complained of being assaulted by the foki, and requested him to step out of his shop. This the foki would not do, and after a while the pair walked away.

Later on, they returned, with two other men, including the defendant. Once more, the foki was asked to come outside, but again she refused. Defendant then walked into the shop and tried to pull the unwilling foki out. When he found he could not do so, he picked up a piece of firewood, and struck the foki over the head. The foki was knocked unconscious, and was taken to a hospital where he stayed for some time.

The trouble-making woman and her husband could not be found, having fled from their lodgings, but defendant had been arrested on information on August 8.

Defendant was sentenced to 15 months, being fined $25 or one month, and ordered to pay $10 compensation in monthly instalments of $1.

Apprentice Beaten

For beating an apprentice under his care with a yard rule, So Sam, 19, shop master, was fined $50 or six weeks by Mr. E. Himsforth at the Kowloon Magistracy yesterday. The apprentice, Wong Cheung, aged 16, was brought before the court, revealing several large welts.

Inspector J. R. McWalter said defendant made brass ornaments at his shop, and about 2 p.m. on Monday, he saw the apprentice using the wrong hammer on a piece of brass-work.

Flying into a rage, So took the boy up to the cockpit, and thrashed him, keeping him in the loft until about 10 o'clock that night, when he managed to escape. He went to his aunt, and she brought the matter before the police.

"This punishment inflicted on the boy," declared the Magistrate, "is beyond all proportion. I am not prepared to punish him at all, but certainly you are not allowed to inflict any of this nature."

KENYA REFUGEES

ABYSSINIANS MAKE FOR COLONY

Mombasa, Aug. 24.

The infiltration of refugees from Abyssinia is causing the Government anxiety in consequence of the hardships they are experiencing and the danger from roaming bands of brigands.

Reinforcements of European and native police have consequently been despatched to the northern frontier province.

The Governor of Kenya recently estimated that 5,000 refugees had entered the country but it is believed that many more since have crossed the border, although the Italian Consul here asserts that they are unable to evade the strong Italian border patrols.

Nevertheless pestilence has stricken the starving and footsore Abyssinians roaming the country in north Kenya.

Smallpox has broken out in concentration camps and unaffiliated refugees are attempting to escape, but they have been rounded up.

Medical measures are being taken to combat the danger of the disease spreading among the neighbouring Kenya tribes.—Reuter Special.

DEATH SENTENCE

CABIN-BOY'S TRIAL CONCLUDES

Chung Chi-cheung, 22-year-old former cabin-boy of the Chinese Maritime Customs cruiser Cheung Keng, was yesterday at the Criminal Sessions found guilty of the murder of Captain Douglas Lorne Campbell, aged 27, Master of the cruiser, and sentenced to death by the Chief Justice, Sir Atholl McGregor.

Mr. George She, instructed by Mr. K. F. Wong, of G. K. Hall-Brutton and Company, appeared for accused, and advanced the contention that there were many doubts in the Crown case that Captain Campbell may have been accidentally shot or that deceased had killed the Captain while of unsound mind.

The murder occurred on board the cruiser on January 11 last, while the vessel was outside the Colony's waters, and it was alleged that defendant, after shooting the Captain, shot and seriously wounded the Chief Officer, and then turned the weapon on himself.

The Crown was represented by Mr. J. Whyatt, Assistant Attorney-General, and the Jury empanelled were Messrs. E. S. Abraham, Foreman, G. Halley, Cheng Kwong, Ur Sal-ling, P. A. Finlayson, T. Wong and M. A. Xavier.

Was Under Observation

After the fifth interval, Dr. G. I. Shaw was called by Mr. Whyatt. Dr. Shaw said that, at the request of the police, he had been under observation in the jail hospital. Witness had chatted with accused on four different occasions for over 20 minutes, and formed the conclusion that he was mentally sound, except that he seemed to be in distress.

Witness did not think that a person could suffer loss of memory from a wound in the chest. There was seriously no difference between aspirin and aspro, said Dr. Shaw. An overdose might make the heart beat more quickly, but he himself had never seen a case in which aspirin or aspro caused poisoning. He had observed cases of weakening of the pulse and faintness. Many people who took large doses of aspro never suffered any consequences.

If accused had taken a large dose of aspro, witness did not think it was possible for him to have done what the Crown alleged, without knowing what he was doing. Replying to Mr. She, witness said he had seen sleep-walkers. He agreed that they did do intelligible things in an automatic way. Loss of memory could occur suddenly.

After Mr. Whyatt had addressed the Jury, Mr. She said that the case was a simple and perplexing one. With the exception of what happened in the Captain's cabin, the facts were undisputed. He submitted that the Crown had to prove guilt, and in the unlikely event of the Jury, on the evidence, saying that accused had committed the deliberate murder of Captain Campbell, counsel would say that when he did it, he was not conscious of what he was doing.

His Lordship summed up, and after a brief retirement of three minutes, the Jury returned a verdict of guilty. His Lordship then pronounced sentence of death, and accused's wife and relatives in Court burst into tears.

His Lordship thanked the Jury for the extreme care and attention they had shown in the case. He appreciated their responsible task in being called upon to serve in a Jury of that nature, and was glad to exempt them from further jury service until the next jury year.

LIFE IN SPAIN

ROYALTY AND LADIES HEAR ABOUT SERRITAS

"Ladies' Day" at the weekly meeting of the Hongkong Rotary Club yesterday was largely attended by royal and noble ladies, including the title of "Recollections of life in Spain."

Major A. D. Walker, President, was in the Chair, and among those present were noticed Commodore and Mrs. E. D. C. Deedes, Lady MacGregor, Sir Samuel Clark, Sir Henry Pollock, Mrs. Walker and Mrs. Graves. Rotarian visitors included Messrs. W. Y. Lee, B. J. Miles, W. Millington, G. P. Bradford, Dr. Ho, H. Tan, all of Shanghai; H. S. Chuk, Canton; E. P. Mathewson, Arizona.

It was announced that the collection after lunch would be devoted to buying toys for refugee youngsters who were stated to be sadly lacking in this respect. The meeting terminated with approval of the suggestion which netted $47 for the fund.

The speaker described a trip from the frontier town of Burgos, the ancient capital of Old Castile where she rammed through its historical associations chiefly wound round the national hero El Cid Campeador. She found much to interest her in the variety of dishes at comida (dinner), in the hotel customs, and the simple lives of the country people.

Mrs. Barrett described the old formal style of courtship and her experiences at a bull fight in Burgos, where the crowd added a minor violation to the entertainment because the bulls were not fierce enough.

In San Sebastian she saw pelota played, and was fascinated by the traditional dances and competitions of the Basques.

Spain had had its share of strife and bloodshed, as was evidenced even by the statuesque damaged by the soldiers of Napoleon years before, and now history was repeating itself, said the speaker.

When she was there some of the most typically Spanish things she saw were the priceless paintings, old world monasteries, the Toledo steel town, and the Inn where Cervantes wrote.

The thanks of those present were expressed by Major Walker.

CHINA RELIEF ASSOCIATION LADIES' RESPONSE TO MADAME CHIANG

In response to a telegram sent by Madame Chiang Kai-shek to Madame T. V. Soong in Hongkong, a big drive for relief funds in connection with the wounded and other Chinese soldiers has been started here under the chairmanship of Mrs. Rose Tan.

Mrs. Tan stated yesterday that she called a meeting of friends a week ago and an Executive Committee of 41 members was formed. This has been divided into six groups who are aiming at collecting funds under the title of the Hongkong Chinese Women's Helpers Relief Association. Donations of money and jewels to the extent of several thousands of dollars have already been received, but more are solicited and can be sent to Mrs. Tan, who is also Hon. Treasurer, at the Chinese Merchants' Club (Tuesdays 9.30 a.m. to 12.30 p.m. and Fridays 2 to 5 p.m.) or at her home at No. 1, Suffolk Road, Kowloon Tong, Tel. No. 57937.

Owing to the urgency of the request from Madame Chiang Kai-shek, the funds are being sent to her direct as soon as possible.

Women Helpers
The appeal for Women Helpers, who will make bandages and needed articles for the Chinese troops in Shanghai, has met with excellent response from the women of Hongkong. The first meeting was held at the Helena May Institute yesterday morning, and although it was advertised to open at 10 a.m., many had already arrived at 9.30 a.m.

A large store of linen which, in Dr. Arthur Woo's opinion, would be sufficient for the morning's work, was soon used up. On hearing of the shortage, the Helena May Institute gave a large quantity of sheets and table-linen, which by 11.30 had also been used. Thus it will be understood that linen for bandages, Turkish towelling for pads, and funds, are urgently needed by the Helpers.

As the Helena May Institute is also used for other meetings, and is not available every day, future meetings of the Women Helpers will take place at St. John's Cathedral Hall from 10 a.m. till noon daily.

Another branch of the Women Helpers is expected to open in Kowloon in the near future.

More than fifty women of all nationalities met yesterday, and everyone was kept busy either tearing the linen into strips for the regulation size bandage, 3 inches by 5 yards, roughly folding the strips, rolling the bandages or sewing them. The rolled cloth is then sent to be sterilized to make it safe for use.

The bandage rollers, only six of which are in the Colony, are used by the Chinese Red Cross Nurses in the afternoon, therefore it is hoped that more of the rollers will be obtained soon.

Among the Helpers present yesterday morning were Mrs. A. W. Bartholomew, Mrs. L. C. Reid, Mrs. Graves, Mrs. Easley, Mrs. G. H. Bateman, the Misses King, the three Misses Lee, Mrs. Rosa Kwok and many others. Many American ladies, some of whom are on summer trips to the Colony, have also offered their services.

OUR GUIDE TO THE CINEMAS

"Pallace" (Kina's Theatre, to-day).—While Richard Tauber is singing this film is entrancing, but beyond this it has several shortcomings. Nevertheless Tauber compensates for them with his irreproachable rendering of the many famous arias, and taken by and large, it is a film of rich entertainment.

"Love in A Bungalow" (Queen's Theatre, to-day).—Nan Grey, a comparatively newcomer to the world of film stardom gives a very pleasing performance in this gay, inconsequential domestic comedy. Kent Taylor is refreshing, and the whole thing is lightly fantastic, but wholly enjoyable.

"Parole Racket" (Alhambra Theatre, to-day).—In direct contrast to this serious-minded document which sets out to expose yet another of America's exploited administrations. The story is told with conviction, with Rossing Keith, Paul Kelly, Leone Maricle, Thurston Hall and others playing their parts with great determination.

"Man Of The People" (Majestic Theatre, to-day).—Cleverly unfolded story with the leading parts competently handled by Joseph Calleia, Florence Rice, Ted Healy, Thomas Mitchell and Catharine Doucet.

"Let's Sing Again" (Oriental Theatre, to-day).—Super-soprano Bobby Green taking every opportunity of putting the film's title into practice, and succeeding admirably.

"Jungle Princess" (Star Theatre).—Spectacular, especially the photographic effects. Dorothy Lamour looks beautiful and plays her part intelligently.

Without Calomel—And You'll Jump Out of Bed Full of Vigor.
The liver should pour out two pints of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. You get constipated. Gas bloats up your stomach. You get nervous. Your whole system is poisoned and you feel sour, sick and the world looks black.
Laxatives are only make-shifts. A mere bowel movement doesn't get at the cause. It takes those famous Carter's Little Liver Pills to get three pints of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up". Harmless, gentle, yet so effective in making bile flow freely. AMERICA AND THE FAR EAST CRISIS

The appeal by Mr. Cordell Hull, United States Secretary of State, to China and Japan to "refrain from resorting to war" in the settlement of their differences, is couched in cautious diplomatic language. Actually, of course, a state of undeclared war now exists between the two nations, with Japan the instigator thereof. Mr. Hull concedes that the present situation in the Far East is the concern of all nations, since it is the outcome of failure to recognise principles of international law which have been accepted by most of the countries of the world. Attention is drawn in particular to the provisions of the Kellogg Pact and the Nine-Power Treaty, of which both China and Japan are signatories. Judgment is not passed on the merits of the quarrel, although, reading between the lines, the appeal is obviously directed more to Japan than to China. The Kellogg Pact rules out war as an instrument of national policy, whilst the Nine-Power Treaty guarantees the integrity of China. No-one can say that China, in resisting Japanese aggression, is guilty of breach of the Kellogg Pact, whilst China wants nothing better than respect for the provisions of the Nine-Power Treaty. It is precisely because that latter treaty is being violated by Japan that China is compelled to defend her independence. Mr. Hull made reference, in his appeal, to the statement which he made in July outlining the principles on which the United States' foreign policy is based. In that utterance, which was obviously made with the Far Eastern situation in view, Mr. Hull said he favoured peaceful negotiation of disputes and faithful observance of international obligations, coupled with respect by all nations for the rights of others. At the time, this declaration was interpreted as a warning to Japan in her dealings with China. The latest reiteration of that policy shows that the American attitude remains unchanged. Japan is, without question, impinging on the rights of China, and it is this circumstance which has caused her to forfeit the sympathy of the whole world. With the facts as they are, however, the time has arrived for something more definite and pointed by foreign spokesmen than a uniform appeal to both sides. Japan is the guilty party, not China, and she should be plainly warned that this is the view which other nations take of her actions.

TEN YEARS' TALE OF WORKPEOPLE KILLED IN FACTORIES AND WORKSHOPS IN BRITAIN.
The men and fractions of men represent millions and fractions of millions employed; each coffin represents a hundred deaths; each ambulance ten thousand injured. NOTE HOW, IN SPITE OF ALL SAFETY-FIRST PROPAGANDA, THE COFFINS AND AMBULANCES MULTIPLY WHEN EMPLOYMENT GOES UP

THE jobs that are killing off British workpeople in the greatest numbers are those in mines, factories, ships and railways.

This is not to say that these are the four most dangerous kinds of work in the country: only that, because so many people get a living from them, they are returning the highest totals of industrial deaths.

In the ten years between the end of 1925 and the end of 1935 these four jobs killed 24,877 workpeople. Fewer than 1,000 were killed in all other industrial occupations.

Every three hours, night and day, during the ten years that ended at the beginning of last year, a man, woman, youth or girl was killed at work.

The total number of workpeople killed in this 10-year cycle is greater than the entire population of Canterbury, or Deal; greater than the combined population of Durham and Ely.

A death-roll like this is bad enough in itself. What makes it infinitely more sickening is that a great proportion of these working people need not have died—would not have died if they, or those responsible for their safety, had had the sense to take precautions they knew they ought to take.

This proportion of the 25,800 workpeople killed at their jobs between 1925 and 1935 died because human life is held too cheaply; because this civilised age is not civilised enough yet to understand that the least human life is worth more than the greatest machine.

Not widely quoted in recent newspapers was a passage in the Factories and Workshop inspectors' report setting forth the earliest known record of an industrial accident to a young person (it happened in 1540):

"A yonge childe . . . standing neere to the whele of a horse myll . . . was by some myshap come within the swepe or compass of the cogge whele and therewith was torn in pieces and killed. And, upon inquisition taken, it was founde that the whele was the cause of the childe's death, whereupon the myll was forthwith defaced and pulled downe."

The Chief Inspector's comment was: "This remedy might now be regarded as too radical and uneconomic, but it suggests the alternative to educating the employer."

of China, and it is this circumstance which has caused her to forfeit the sympathy of the whole world. With the facts as they are, however, the time has arrived for something more definite and pointed by foreign spokesmen than a uniform appeal to both sides. Japan is the guilty party, not China, and she should be plainly warned that this is the view which other nations take of her actions.

It suggests, more accurately, what might be the alternative. But it is not: not yet.

By the end of the Middle Ages the people in Britain knew enough to place the life of a child on a higher plane than economics. That horse-mill must have been at least as important to the sixteenth-century community as an average modern factory is to the present community.

They closed it down, and thereby doubtless "educated" every other employer in the locality into the perception that if he wanted to go on earning profits he had better not let his machinery kill a child.

We, enlightened descendants of the horse-mill age, prefer to pursue a less radical but more economic course. We have admired institutions for teaching safety-first in mines, factories, ships and railways.

We print pamphlets and deliver lectures, and unleash what is called propaganda in favour of the preservation of human life. We get the figures for deaths in industry to come down a little each year—

Until the country suddenly becomes more prosperous (that is, until there are only about 1,250,000 insured people who want work and cannot get it), the death rate in industry, then, as appears from the latest factories report, begins to go sharply up again.

"A rising tide of death and injury must still be regarded as the penalty to be paid for increased prosperity" is the way the Chief Inspector of Factories puts it.

LIFE IS CHEAP

By Robert Waithman

The next mines report may or may not show a similar increase in deaths and injuries: it depends largely on whether we can get through the year without more major pit disasters.

The last report indicated that we now require one man to die for every 330,000 tons of coal we get. One in a thousand employees was being killed in British mines and quarries last year. The year before one in 909 was being killed.

If you are told after the end of this year that fifty fewer deaths have occurred in the two foremost death-dealing occupations—that factory fatalities in 1937 have been 870 instead of 920, mines fatalities 815 instead of 865—will you feel any impulse to cheer?

You might if you could be assured that all these deaths were inevitable, that unless all these workpeople had died we could not have coal, or cotton, or collar-studs. But nobody can convince you of that.

On the contrary, the factories inspectors go on saying these things:

"The conclusion is inevitable that too often immediate production is the main if not the only consideration, with the result that safeguarding is left to the last."

"In the woollen and worsted industry 15 per cent. of the total accidents were caused through cleaning machinery in motion."

"It is appalling to notice the number of accidents which could have been avoided by ordinary care and forethought."

And mines inspectors this:

"More than half of the accidents could have been avoided had ordinary care and precaution been exercised by everyone concerned."

"Many of these falls of ground would not have occurred if proper attention were paid to the simple requirements of the Explosives in Coal Mines Order."

"Accident after accident occurs which by the exercise of a little thought or better supervision by the management could have been avoided."

And what everybody says is: The remedy is in the "education" of employers and employees.

With this blinding glimpse of the obvious most of the authorities appear to be content. They do not often say how education can be made effective. And it is by now permissible to doubt whether propaganda posters and lectures can be, after all, what is meant by education. If education means anything it must mean that the interests concerned have to be taught a lesson.

It seems equally clear that the lesson to be taught is that employers who sacrifice lives in the interests of bigger profits must be recognised and classified as criminals, and that workmen who take dangerous risks they could avoid must be denounced as half-wits.

Living on immoral earnings and attempted suicide are both indictable offences in this country. You may be pardoned if you wonder, at this stage of civilisation, why the parallel crimes of profit-earning at the risk of employees' safety and deliberate negligence which endangers life continue to be regarded as evils which it would be too radical or uneconomic to punish.

THE FORBIDDEN WALTZ

DR. SCHUSCHNIGG'S Austrian Government has just forbidden Vienna to waltz, polka or one-step to the tunes of military marches. It is disrespectful to the marches, they say, and an insult to their fine associations.

Dancers never were over-concerned with the solemn associations of their dance tunes.

The steps from which all our sixteenth century France to the notes of the Psalms of David.

A hundred years later Cromwell's armies, less put off than one might expect by their frivolous associations, marched into battle to them.

The big song of the American depression, "Brother, can you spare a dime," meant to recall the most poignant slump associations, turned into a hot jazz number.

On the other hand, dance tunes often acquire a more solemn background than any march. A polka called "Dixie" was the marching song of the American Confederate armies. It never has been played since the Civil War without recalling the shattered glories of the old South.

Some Irish volunteers took a jig tune, St. Patrick's Day, to the South American armies which, a hundred years ago, were fighting for freedom from Spain. The Chileans made it their marching song then and have made it their National Anthem now.

A German children's round dance tune, "O Christmas tree, O Christmas tree, thy needles are so fair to see," has passed as the Red Flag into the anthem of the British Labour movement after a brief and splendid spell as the hymn of the rebel American State of Maryland.

A dance measure written two hundred years ago by Mozart in his Marriage of Figaro is now the slow march of the Brigade of Guards.

All the best songs of the last war came to the trenches off the dance floor.

"Tipperary," "Pack up your troubles" and the American "Over there" began frivolously as fox trots. Now they rouse associations as solemn and moving as any march that ever came out of Austria.

Even "Rule Britannia" began, like "Keep the home fires burning," in pantomime.

Frivolous and solemn, tragic and convivial associations are not easily parted from each other. Is "The girl I left behind me" to be remembered as the tune to which the men marched to Waterloo on the morning of June 18, 1815, or as the quadrille to which they danced at the Duchess of Richmond's ball on the night of June 17.

More tears were choked back in Flanders Fields when the mouth-organ played "Broken Doll" than when the drums and fife struck up the "British Grenadiers."

"I wish to die to the notes of a Saraband," said the 80-year-old French gallant, des Yvetaux. It would take an intolerable prig to ask to die to the notes of the Marseillaise.

Dr. Schuschnigg need only compare the story of two tunes composed in his native Vienna. The Radetzky March was composed by Johann Strauss the elder to celebrate a victory over the Italians in 1849.

But Vienna has long forgotten that and it was this tune's popularity as a one-step that just led up to the general ban on march music in the ball-room.

The Blue Danube Waltz was written by Johann Strauss the younger. It was written for no particular occasion. But there are few people in any part of the world in whom it does not arouse a treasured memory.

There are still fewer who would recognise the Radetzky March if they heard it.

CHURCHILL WARNS ON NAVAL GUNS

Newest Warships "May Be Inferior"

(By WILLIAM BARKLEY)

It is run by Great Britain, the first naval power in the world, in making international agreements on limitation of naval strength, were strenuously emphasised by Mr. Winston Churchill in the House of Commons last month.

He supported, on general grounds, the London Naval Treaty between Britain, U.S. and France, which Germany and Russia joined last Saturday, but he argued that it is never to Britain's advantage to make treaties which hamper our freedom to design the ships we need.

Mr. Churchill fastened on the point that Britain, the United States, Germany and France were all agreed that the maximum gun in any of their navies should be the 14-inch. When Japan refused to be a party to the agreement, the United States announced that they also must have power to build a 16-inch gun into their ships.

To his mind that meant that the foreign Powers meant to arm their ships with 16-inch guns because he assumed that America knows what Japan is doing.

He emphasised that the five new battleships which we are now building, two laid down last year and three this year, have 14-inch guns as their biggest cannon.

"A REPROACH"

"These battleships will," he said, "be magnificent ships. Under this agreement no new battleship can be built above 35,000 tons. So far the Admiralty have taken the view that it is impossible to build 16-inch guns into a 35,000-ton hull. Suppose that the German, French, Italian and American naval engineers discover that they can solve this problem what will be the position of the Royal Navy who are forbidden for five years to construct a vessel larger than 35,000 tons?"

"It will be something of a reproach to the Royal Navy that our five new battleships, built at a cost of £45,000,000, to be the basis of our sea power for twenty-five years ahead, are definitely inferior to the contemporary vessels which in war they would have to meet."

Mr. Churchill, who knows naval matters from beginning to end, therefore urged Mr. Duff Cooper, the First Lord, to make alternative designs for the battleships.

He pleaded with him at least to make one experimental gun-mounting for a sixteen-inch gun so that if Foreign designers succeeded where we failed the British Navy could swiftly alter the gun equipment of the new battleships from fourteen-inch to sixteen-inch.

Everybody liked the agreement that Britain, America, Germany and France undertake in future to inform one another of their new naval building programmes. This includes Russia so far as that country builds ships in European waters.

On this point Mr. Churchill gave a most interesting personal revelation. He was in charge of the Navy, and saw that it was fighting fit for 1914.

TOLD THE TRUTH

"Before the war," he said, "there were serious fears that Germany was building secretly. There were stories of secret draughts which were going to emerge from bombhouses on the Elbe."

He got in direct touch with Admiral von Tirpitz, and asked what was the truth of German naval construction. Von Tirpitz gave Churchill certain assurances.

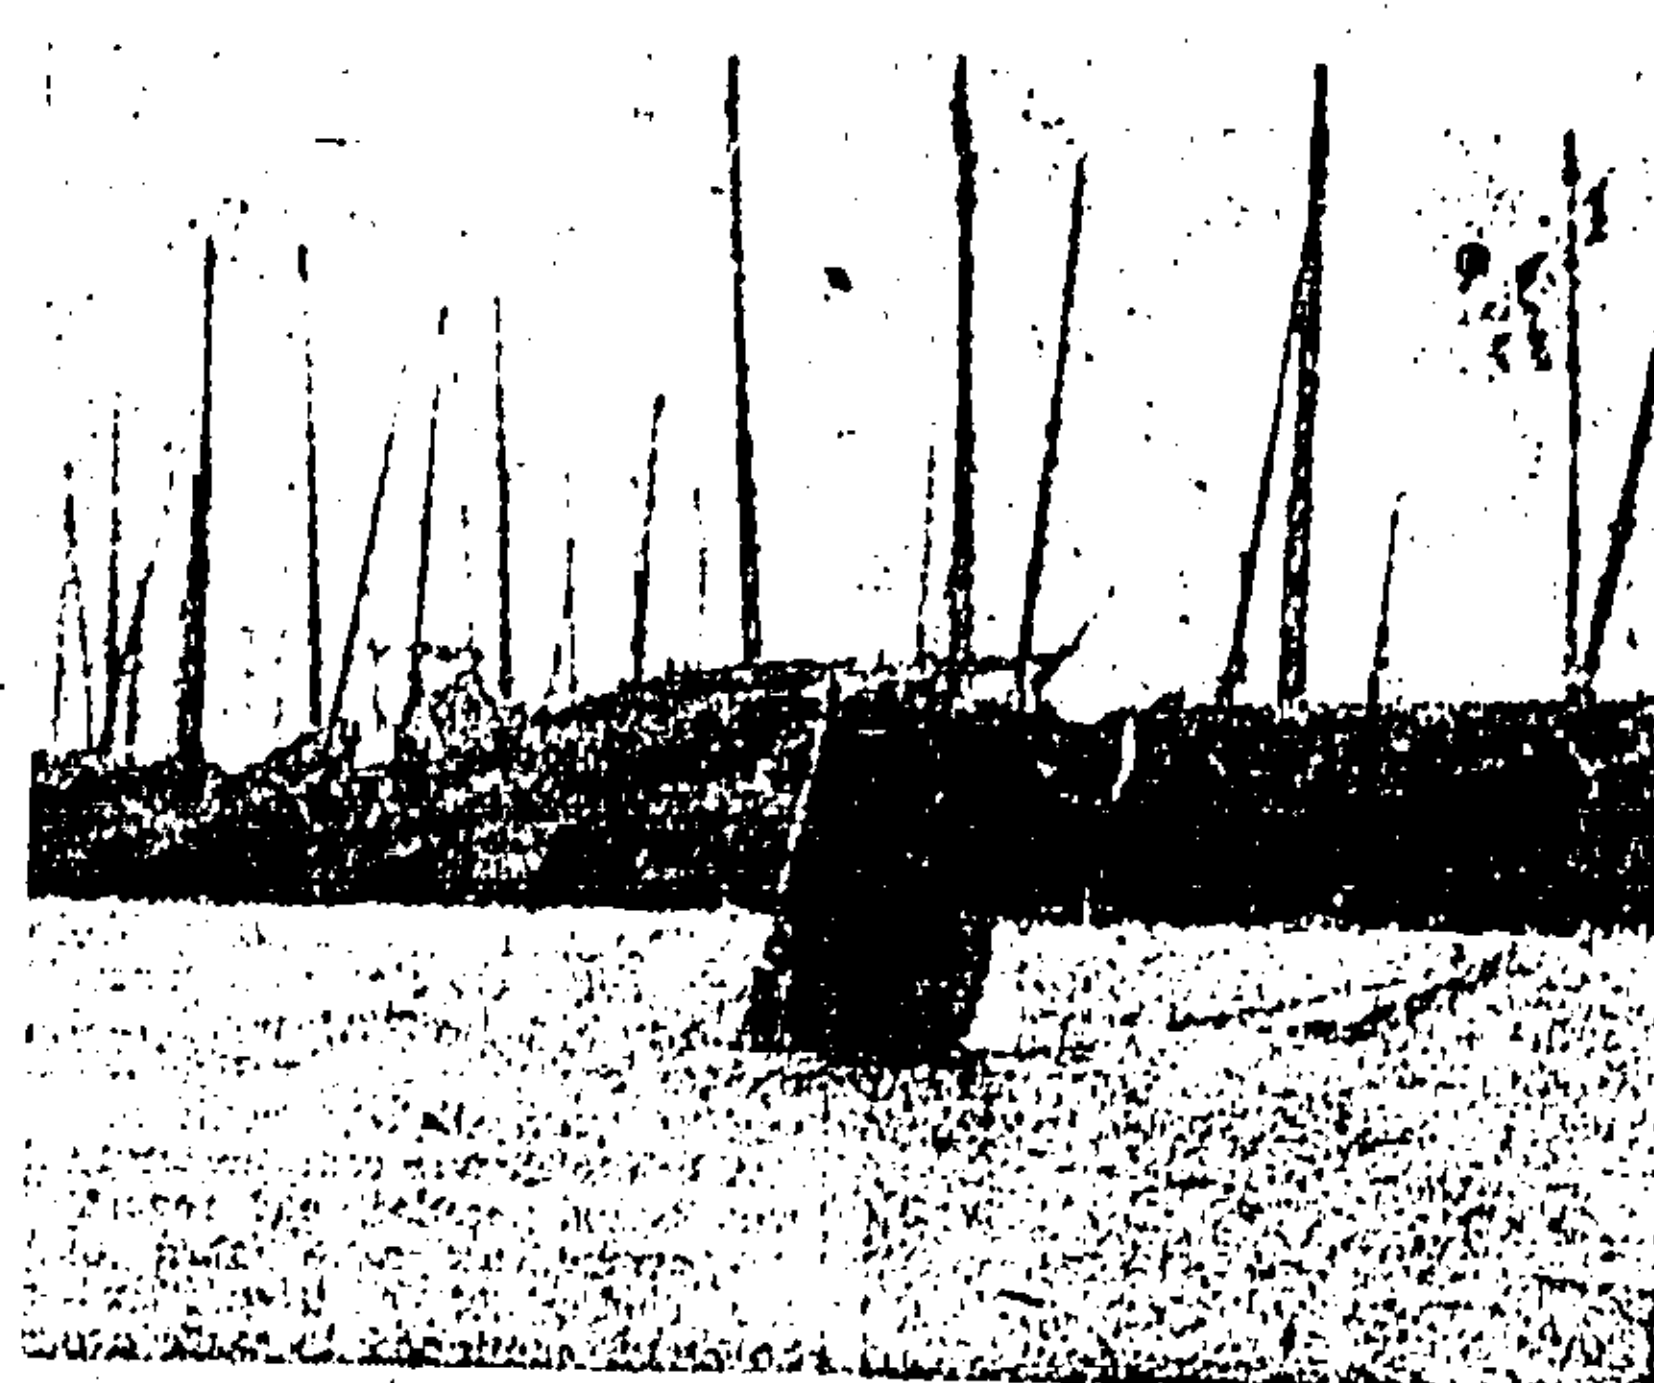

"The assurances which Admiral von Tirpitz gave me," said Mr. Churchill, "were, I am bound to say, in every sense true."

Mr. Churchill's warning was acknowledged by Mr. Shakespeare, Parliamentary Secretary to the Admiralty, who said: "If there is a departure from the limitation from 14-inch guns that is not our fault. Our experts are fully seized with the problem. Preparations are well advanced and the matter is in hand."

The new treaty, which the House of Commons approved without a division, secures qualitative limitation of naval building among U.S.A., Germany, France and Britain. No vessel over 35,000 tons shall be constructed. Germany has power to build five 10,000 ton cruisers, but has announced that she will build only three. No cruisers will be more than 10,000 tons and 17,000 ton battleships. The participating Powers will inform one another of their proposed programmes.

Italy has not signed the treaty because when it was negotiated Britain and France were imposing sanctions upon her in regard to the Abyssinian war, but it is considered that now she may agree.

BOOM ACROSS SHANGHAI RIVER

The Chinese authorities in Shanghai have laid down a barrage across the river from Nantao to Pootung. Several steamers and sailing boats have been sunk as part of the boom. Top picture shows all that remains to be seen of the Foo Shing, her funnel and mast; lower photo shows a sunken junk.

EPSITEIN SAYS "BUTCHERS!"

Banned Statues 'Too High To Tar'

Jacob Epstein was modelling some new controversy in his London studio recently when he heard that eighteen statues which he put up in his young rebel days, thirty years ago, are to be taken down.

The statues are those on the Southern Rhodesia Government building in the Strand.

Mr. Lanigan O'Keefe, High Commissioner, announcing their removal, said a committee of experts had reported that the stone had been decayed by London's dirty weather, making the statues a danger to people in the street.

"EXPERTS, INDEED"

Bald, plump, and just a little weary, Epstein in middle-age—he is now fifty-seven—still rises fervently to the defence of his work.

"So they say it is the weather now, do they?" he said. "Experts, indeed! Experts! They mean butchers, with my work as the carcass."

"No one ever liked those figures but me. The architect didn't, the public didn't. They were too high to be tarred, but they've had worse; they've had committees."

"By now I thought people were used to them. But, no; they've had to get this excuse for tearing them down. It's sheer prejudice, prejudice."

He shook with anger, his words tumbling out. "They've always been against me," he said. "Am I not an expert? Should I not have been consulted?"

"I have worked in stone since a child. Could my opinion not have been asked? Oh, no! I was not even allowed to see them."

"Well, let me tell you, I have had my own expert look at those statues and he says they are safe. All the dangerous pieces have already been removed; the rest will stand for years."

"MY YOUNG WORK"

Epstein's hair is grey, just a wild fringe round the edge of a round pink head. He fiddles with spec-

Stabbed A Man In Her Flat, Says Divorcee

A WOMAN, who said she was a divorcee, told recently how she twice stabbed with an Indian dagger a man she accused of attacking her in her flat.

She was Mrs. Irene Sneyd, of Pond-place, Chelsea. She described the affair when John Kerr, aged 39, accountant of West Side Clapham Common, was remanded at Westminster Police Court, accused of stealing a golden ball key and five £1 notes, and of breaking into her flat.

Mrs. Sneyd said that with friends she met Kerr at a night club. Later he called for her and they went out together.

On returning she had no key and a porter had to get into her flat by a window.

While resting on her bed she fell asleep, and woke to find herself seized by Kerr.

"I struggled up," she said. "He looked like a maniac, I was terrified."

Mr. R. E. Seaton (prosecuting): "What sort of resistance did you put up?"

Mrs. Sneyd: "I fought. I got hold of the knife. I picked it up and stabbed him twice."

Kerr was again remanded.

He was found in yellow and red rubber bands. But his hands are strong and young. They banged on the edge of the table as he continued:

"I am particularly fond of those pieces. They are my young work, and I like them. I am their spiritual owner."

He showed me a typewritten letter from Mr. O'Keefe, dated June 28, declining to allow Epstein to inspect the statues "until the statement made by you alleging male fides and prejudice are withdrawn as publicly as you have made them."

Epstein went on: "Then this report—just pretentious slobbering. It means nothing, except that after thirty years they still don't like what I did when I was a young man."

He chuckled, twiddled his grey hair and said: "I am still ahead of them, eh?"

On The Borderline

RAILMEN'S WIVES REVEAL BUDGETS

Union chief Mr. John Marchbank has been to the humblest homes of his railwaymen followers in the great junction towns of the Midlands and north, collecting evidence in his fight for restoration of the last quarter of the five per cent. wage cuts of 1931.

For four hours recently the burly impressive figure of Mr. Marchbank, recently out of hospital, suffering intense pain from an eye complaint, argued his case before the Tribunal of Three at the Ministry of Labour. The tribunal—Sir Arthur Salter, Mr. Maurice S. Gibb, and Mr. H. J. May—are considering not only the wage cut application. Railmen seek improved conditions, minimum wage of 50s. and more paid holidays.

120,000 'JUST EXIST'

All the concessions, say the companies, will cost about £15,000,000 a year, but Mr. Marchbank spoke of vastly different amounts—the budgets of seven anonymous families.

There is Mr. A. who, with his wife and two children, depends on 30s. a week. Mr. B. whose wife's "budget" allows 45s. a week for entertainment and luxuries for a family of four; Mr. C. who sometimes rejoices because he can work on Sunday at increased rates; Mr. D. who modestly allows himself and family 2s. a week for new clothes; Mr. E. who has four children to support on less than 45s. a week, and so on.

Mr. Marchbank's quiet Lowland Scots voice suddenly rose as he cried: "There are 120,000 of our people not living, but just existing." Then followed Mr. W. J. R. Smeaton, white-haired leader of the Locomotive Engineers and Firemen whose staccato sentences in a Welsh accent frequently betrayed emotion as he talked of the increasing strain on the footplate men because of higher speeds.

This morning the railwaymen's leaders will continue their case which directly affects half a million men.

BROTHERS MEET FOR FIRST TIME ONE AGED 66, THE OTHER 53

TWO brothers, one aged 66, the other 53, met for the first time in their lives at Ripley, Surrey, recently.

The elder, Arthur Giles, cheerful, stout, and white-haired, is a Londoner.

He strolled into the local inn and said to the villagers he met there: "I am Percy Giles' brother. Can you tell me where he lives?"

"Go on! You are kidding us," they replied. "He isn't your brother." But the stranger settled their doubts by producing Percy's birth certificate.

Just to make sure that the sudden reunion would have no ill-effects on Percy, the licensee of the inn called inside, whispered that a man wanted to see him, and supplied him with a "stiffener."

And then the news was broken. ELDER BROTHER'S STORY.

Arthur, who lives with his wife at Bendemeer Road, Putney, S.W., is a gardener. He has a son and daughter. This is the story he told the Daily Herald.

"I was just a boy when my father, a retired police sergeant, took an inn at Buntingford, Herts. He died two years later, and I was sent to live with my grandparents.

"Mother went to Ockham, to await the arrival of a child that was born posthumously.

"That child was Percy. Mother gave him to relatives, and left the village with her other child, a girl. She married again, and so the family drifted apart.

"I never saw my baby brother and did not know where he was, and he knew nothing about me.

"When my mother died I was entrusted with his birth certificate. A few years ago I met a builder's foreman who told me he had employed my brother, and that he was living at Ripley.

"I am on holiday this week, so I put Percy's birth certificate in my pocket and my wife and I came here to find him.

"We shall meet often now, I hope."

To Kiss Your Hand, Madam

Hand-Kissing will soon again be the formal way of greeting women. Women are not satisfied with handshakes, says Hollywood's Max Factor.

They want something more intimate. Here are some comments by women stars:

Marlene Dietrich: Very charming. I done by one who knows how. I am sure I always get giggly when my hand is kissed.

Irene Dunne: Must be learned at an early age or it is likely to be clumsy.

Patsy Kelly: Always afraid I'm going to be bitten.

GRAND MIDDLESEX CHALLENGE FOR CRICKET TITLE

Beat Kent While Yorkshire Draw To Regain Leadership

ALL-IMPORTANT FINAL STAGES START TO-DAY

THRILLING END TO THE SEASON

The county cricket championship is still an excitingly open contest. Yesterday Middlesex regained the leadership when they beat Kent and Yorkshire could win only first innings points from Surrey. Both teams have two more matches to play. Yorkshire oppose Sussex at Eastbourne and Hampshire at Bournemouth; Middlesex have to meet Notts at Nottingham and Surrey at Lord's.

Although Yorkshire made Surrey follow-on, they could not force an outright decision. This was due to Fishlock and Gregory who batted splendidly to score a century apiece in the second innings. Fishlock also enjoyed the distinction of hitting up two centuries in the same match.

Middlesex just scraped home against Kent, but the losers made a gallant attempt to score 430 in the fourth innings, falling only by 75 runs. P. G. H. Chalk the young amateur compiled 107 and Leslie Ames contributed 90. However, R. W. V. Robins put in some effective bowling and his 5 for 49 eventually won the game for Middlesex.

A double century by Barnett for Gloucester was a feature of the latest programme of matches. Gloucester beat Lancashire by 215, Goddard coming along in the second innings to bowl most effectively and to send back the Lancastrians for 186.

Victories were scored by Glamorgan (by nine wickets against Leicestershire), Derbyshire (by 45 runs against Worcester), Warwickshire (by nine wickets against Northants). The results of an evening performance, as called by Reuter were as follows:

Middlesex (277 and 325/7) dec. beat Kent (173 and 358) by 75 runs

Vagabonds All Out Twelve Runs

Once upon a time there was a club called Vagabonds and they played the Exiles at a game called cricket in London.

Now, the Exiles knew how to bowl, but the Vagabonds were not too good at batting, and some very funny things began to happen.

One of the best Vagabonds, for instance, was called an opening batsman. That was very strange, for he did not receive his first ball until the fall of the sixth wicket.

Which wouldn't have been so bad had he not been out to that first ball.

However, the Vagabonds were brave and ten of them batted and when the innings was over they had scored 12 whole runs.

The real villain was J. L. Harding, who took five wickets for 4 runs. His accomplice, F. A. Bowen, could only take five for 7 runs.

Oh, and the Exiles made 155. It happened last month.

School Tennis And The L.T.A.

The Sports Editor,
Hongkong Telegraph.

Sir,—Regarding the article by "Veritas" in Monday's Telegraph about tennis, I have some useful suggestions to put forward.

He said that it was time the L.T.A. encouraged Hongkong schoolboy tennis players. I agree this is very necessary. So far there is no place in tennis for schoolboys (I am talking about the majority). Of course there are some schools which provide their boys with very good courts on which to practice and to play tournaments to raise their standard. But what the majority do is to play privately with one or two of their schoolmasters under conditions which can never improve their game. They cannot interchange their knowledge of the game with other schools which may have better players, therefore they have no chance of meeting players better than themselves. So their standard of play remains unchanged.

The only remedy is to stage either a schoolboys' league (like the Schoolboys' Football League) or tournaments. Who is going to do this? The only body is the L.T.A. But they have their difficulties too, and therefore co-operation with others is needed. The big difficulty is one of courts. As most schools have hard courts, I do not know whether the L.T.A. would stage a tournament or league on such courts. If lawn courts are considered necessary, the only available for the schoolboys are those of Queen's College at Causeway Bay. Then the question crops up whether Government will permit these courts to be used for such a purpose. The courts are primarily for boys studying in Government schools, and as the participants in a tournament or league would include other than Government school boys, the only thing to do is for the L.T.A. to seek co-operation with the Education Department, which is always glad to help in this direction.

The following schools have already introduced tennis into their activities and will almost assuredly support an L.T.A. scheme to forward the game:—King's College, Queen's College, C.B.S., St. Stephen's, St. Paul's College, La Salle and D.B.S.

All of the above schools have their hard courts with the exception of Queen's, and the above mentioned schools could easily run a successful league. The way, therefore, seems open to the L.T.A. to make an effort to organise tennis in our schools. S.A.

FLOODLIT FOOTBALL NO LONGER A STUNT

(By W. Capel Kirby)

I wonder how long it will be before football by artificial light becomes as general in England as it is elsewhere. Anybody who has any thing to do with the financial side of Soccer will tell you that the later the kick-off the greater the revenue.

Play matches at night and you rope in the shopkeepers and assistants who never get a chance to watch football from one season to another. Now that floodlighting systems have reached a stage of perfection, there is absolutely no reason why matches should start an hour or so earlier on Saturdays in the mid-winter months.

Artificial light would be preferable to outlookers having to strain their eyes trying to make out ghostly figures prancing around in semi-darkness.

On the Continent it is not unusual for powerful lamps to be switched on when the light is fading towards the end of a game, while I have vivid recollections of the Olympic polo vault championships starting in brilliant sunshine and finishing in brilliant floodlight.

ARSENAL WILL LEAD

In fact, watching these athletes go up and over the 14 ft. mark in a blaze of light while all around was in darkness was as grand a spectacle as one could have wished to see.

When the time comes for our Soccer leaders to realise that floodlit football is more than a stunt, I think you will find Arsenal leading the way. I understand it is just a question of an engineer pulling a switch lever.

"November . . . Arsenal v. Glasgow Rangers, at Highbury. Kick-off 8 p.m." Is it only a dream?

Big figures seem to be an Arsenal monopoly although at the time of writing the offer of £12,000 has failed to lure a certain young Welshman from Wolverhampton to Highbury.

Why must Arsenal always fly high? You may ask. One very good reason is that only the best will satisfy 50,000 patrons who have been given only the very best for a number of seasons.

Arsenal set themselves a standard which must be maintained regardless of cost. Overhead charges at Highbury are enormous, and the management cannot afford to risk loss of support through providing mediocre fare.

FIVE TENNIS TESTS IN AUSTRALIA

Melbourne, July 26.
British women's proposed lawn tennis tour of Australia includes five Test matches. The tourists will also play in the Australian championships. Matches with Miss Nancy Wynne, Australian champion, and the finest woman player for many years, are eagerly awaited. There would be keen disappointment if a team not fully representative were sent.

The British itinerary is: November 15, arrive Sydney; 24, 26 and 27, First Test (Brisbane); December 9, 10, 11, Second Test (Sydney), between 11 and 27, two days' visit to Tasmania; 27, 28, 29, Third Test (Melbourne); January 6, 7, 8, Fourth Test (Sydney); 22 to 29, Australian championships (Adelaide); February 10, 11, 12, v. Victoria (Melbourne); 24, 25, 26, Fifth Test (Perth).—Reuter.

ENGLISH SEASON IN REVIEW

Domination Of Bad Weather

(By A Polo Correspondent)

To commence with there was every promise of a splendid season but the weather played havoc with the programme and the net result is rather disappointing. There were only seven weeks to work off the three Open Cups, the Inter-Regimental, the Coronation Cup and innumerable high and low handicap competitions. It is intensive polo, and far too intensive to be satisfactory. Unless the normal English polo season could be prolonged into August and early September, ideal polo months, and not carried through at its present pace, there cannot be much hope to get even with the Americans or the Argentines. As it was one team, Addon—run through their ponies before the Championship Cup, and there was hardly a team or a pony at the end of the season that was not stale.

A splendid offer from the Argentine to send a team out there had to be turned down, because we could not find six players good enough to go, who were willing to undertake the journey. Comment is surely unnecessary. I am afraid that fact is the most significant one of the season.

The whole subject of Rule 10, too, is once more in the air. It is, I understand, under active consideration at the moment. Rule 10 says "No player shall pay or receive payment for playing polo." Now for many years past wealthy patrons of the game have mounted and contributed to the expenses of young players who could not afford the expense of best pre-war players owe their start to such help. Both they and those who assisted them were the very best of sportsmen. This state of affairs continues, and with one of the Goulburn ponies changing hands at 1,700 guineas, polo is getting no cheaper. There are obviously players to-day who are being financed in some way or other. Most of us cannot see why not, but I agree that the rub comes in the legitimate derivation of "expenses." Is it a bus fare to Putney, or does it include sending to the best chances in the Open Cups, were the Jaguars, the Four Winds, Bhopal, and Goulburn. Bhopal started poorly, but just as the Nawab was finding his form he had a serious accident, and that put him out of polo forever. The season, however, took his place, and the team won the Ranleigh Cup, after the great game against Addon in the semi-final. It looked like a win for Lord Louis Mountbatten's sporting side, for whom Mr. Lakin was playing brilliantly, and that put chucker; then they were able to play the game out of the fire. After that Hamut Singh transferred to the Jaguars, and the team did not compete again, to everybody's regret.

Goulburn started badly, and never looked like winning either the Ranleigh or the Rothampton Open Cups. Then they dropped Mr. P. S. K. Ashton and put in Mr. R. Skene for their Champion Cup effort. They met the Jaguars in the final, and thanks partly to Mr. Skene's brilliant play, but much more because they fulfilled the ambition of seven years' hard work and took our premier trophy back to Australia. It was a wonderful achievement, and their win was very popular. It is extraordinary to think that it is only for the last ten years that ponies have been played in Australia in other than snaffle bits.

The Four Winds turned out to be rather a mild sort of Zephyr, though they had two British internationalists and two of our best. Much of their play was too bad to be true, but they redeemed themselves in their Champion Cup semi-final, which they all but won. Captain Guinness, who must be mounted exactly to his requirements, did not find his form until Assol week, when he gave a brilliant display in the Army v. Goulburn match at Aldershot.

OUTSTANDING PLAYERS
This brings us to the Jaguars who won the Rothampton Open easily enough. Then Mr. Whitton, Guest went off to Africa to shoot elephants and they were without a regular back for the rest of the season. They also won the Coronation Cup, though they would probably not have done so if Mr. Jim Ashton had played for Goulburn. (Continued to Page 9.)

FIRST OPENING STAND OF 100 FOR ENGLAND SINCE 1935

(By Frank Thorogood)
England 358 for 9; New Zealand to bat.

Manchester weather has wrecked many a Test match at Old Trafford, and in the early morning it looked as if history was about to repeat an old and melancholy tale. Rain fell before and after breakfast, and at the moment fixed for the opening of the match conditions overhead appeared to be savagely eloquent of an approaching thunderstorm.

Yet by some miracle of grace it was possible to begin at ten minutes to twelve and thereafter we had but two trivial interruptions. Except for one short period after lunch, the light was never good and before the interval it was almost bad enough to justify an appeal.

A GLOOMY ENVIRONMENT

In all these circumstances it was hard to develop any burning enthusiasm for the game, and the gloomy environment appeared to affect several of our leading batsmen.

Hammond did not stay long enough to get the real "feel" of his scoring bat, and Hardstaff was very disappointing. Though concerned in the longest partnership of the innings, he could never realise anything like his best form.

On a wicket that played easily until after the tea interval, the most pleasing incident of the day was the opening partnership of exactly a hundred between Barnett and Hutton. This was an alliance which not only confirmed our faith in Barnett as England's opening batsman, but restored our confidence in Hutton.

Few other opening batsmen get off to such a start with greater ease than Barnett, and his off and cover drives were made as Hammond at his best can make them. An easy catch to mid-on was the result of the only un-Barnett-like stroke of a delightful innings, which included six '4's.

NEVER DULL TO WATCH

Hutton went on to complete his first hundred in a Test match, and he did it exceedingly well. At five covers driving, and these strokes, admirably placed, were leavened by the on drive and the leg hit. It was Hutton's ninth century of the year.

It is significant that England's opening partnership of three figures represents the first in a Test match since 1935, when Robert Wyatt and Denis Smith, the Derbyshire left-handers, put up 128 at Lord's against South Africa.

Will another Yorkshireman in Hutton help to bring back the palmy days of Hobbs and Sutcliffe? The wish is indeed father to the thought. And writing of Yorkshire, it is passing strange that the best of the opening partnership on either side during the last series of Test matches in Australia was 53 between Barnett and Verity.

Though Hardstaff helped Hutton to add 128 for the second wicket, the Notts man was never happy, and Paynter's brief innings, eloquent of the leg hit and the on drive, proved the least attractive. The Lancashire man helped Hammond to add 65 for the fourth wicket, but when these two men had gone, England, in seeking to force the game, discovered in Galliehan and Cowie bowlers who were more than equal to the occasion.

FORCING THE PACE
I said that England sought to force the game, but curiously enough this does not apply to Ames, who so far have been at the wickets for nearly an hour. During that time he saw Jim Smith hit a 6 and two 4's, far more attractive. The Lancashire man helped Hammond to add 65 for the fourth wicket, but when these two men had gone, England, in seeking to force the game, discovered in Galliehan and Cowie bowlers who were more than equal to the occasion.

In addition to the two New Zealand bowlers I have mentioned, Vivian and Dunning also kept out batsmen well on the alert, and the fielding, with few exceptions, reached a good standard.

Even allowing for inclement weather and the fact that New Zealand do not yet possess the drawing power associated with Test matches of greater importance, the attendance of 5,000 was alarmingly small for Old Trafford. Only 2,860 paid at the gate and not far away I saw through my glasses an eager crowd watching a boys' Soccer match.

Hammond c. Brown 14
Hardstaff c. Tin 1

VARSPORT IN 1937

Oxford Most Successful

For the second year in succession Oxford has down more of the major annual inter-varsity sporting contests than Cambridge. The major events are those where full Blues are awarded to all or some of the competitors. In the academic year just concluded the Dark Blues were victorious in the events for rowing, cricket, field hockey, tennis, and netball. Cambridge won the contests for Rugby football, lawn tennis, athletics, and cross-country running. The Soccer match was drawn.

In addition to the major events there are many minor encounters where half-Blues are awarded to one or both teams. This is a growing list, and sailing and ski-ing are now classed as such. Then there are sporadic events like table tennis and point-to-point, and others such as motorcycling, which often includes competitors who are "down."

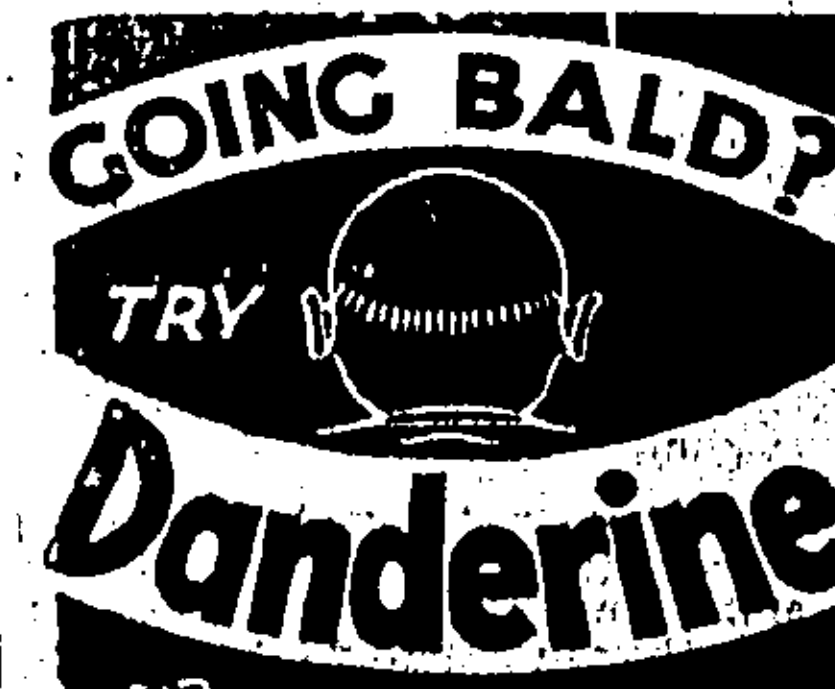

The following specially compiled list shows in bare statistical form the results of the 1936-37 inter-varsity matches, together with the venue of each encounter, the year the event was first introduced, and the present score in the series.

BRITISH ATHLETES' TRIUMPH

SUPERB RUNS OF ROBERTS AND WOODERSON

(By Fred Dartnell)

Paris, July 26.

Although Great Britain defeated France for the fifth time in succession in their athletic international by 66 points to 54 at Colombes yesterday, the French folk have taken their beating in excellent spirit.

Before the match our fellows were described as the best team in Europe. After it was all over the critics generously appraised the superiority of the "Insulaires."

We expected our fellows to win most of their points, as they did, on the track, but it was very gratifying to see Breach carry off the Long Jump with an effort of 23ft. 3½ins. (We also picked up 3 useful points in the High Jump. Here Newman, like Mantran did 6ft. 11in., but the Frenchman was awarded first place, according to rule, for his fewer number of failures.)

BEST PERFORMANCES
Track events held pride of place, however, although the five pole vaulting of the Frenchmen Hamard and Vintousky at our expense was much admired.

Best performances of the day were those of Roberts and Wooderson. The former beat Rampling's record in the 400 metres of 48sec. by half a second, and Wooderson upset Ladoumègue's previous best of 3min. 53.6sec. in the 1,500 metres, with 3 min. 53 sec. in the 1,500 metres, with 3min. 51sec.

It was glorious to see Roberts' lightning thrust to the tape with Wyllie 12 yards away and the French pair trailing desperately in the rear.

Then little Wooderson began to amaze the crowd with his delectable pace. Roberts was majestic in his almost unchallenged superiority, but Wooderson did not have it all his own way. He was out for a world's record, and if he had been pushed more might have achieved one. I reckon that Wooderson's time for the 1,500 metres works out about 4min. 5sec. for the mile.

Normand, the French star, fought him gallantly in the last lap. Wooderson had done 59.0sec. for the 400 metres, 2min. 2sec. for 800 metres, and 3min. 4sec. for 1,200 and in the last lap Normand, as one of the French writers put it, made a "rapid" challenge to the Englishman.

But, to continue the train simile, Wooderson became a still faster express coming up the straight. He won by five seconds from Reg Thomas, who beat the Frenchman for second place.

The crowd cheered Wooderson to the echo and his first anxious question before he could regain his breath was about the time recorded.

"DOUBLE" FOR HOLMES
Six years ago Thomas finished second to the famous Ladoumègue in the same race. He did 3min. 55sec. then and his time yesterday was only 1.8sec. longer.

These veterans do wear well. There was Ernie Page, too. He won the 100 metres six years ago and yesterday afternoon he ran Holmes to inches when the latter won in 10.8sec.

Holmes carried off the double event, as I had tipped him to do. His 200 metres time was 21.6sec. with Richardson a good second.

Lancashire did itself proudly. In addition to Roberts and Holmes, Handley registered an unexpected triumph over our half-mile champion, Collyer, in the 800 metres.

Collyer made all the running, with Soustra as the chief trouble on behalf of France. Collyer stayed off the Frenchman's final challenge up the straight, but was himself beaten by Handley, who came with a tremendous rush to win in 1min. 52.5 sec.

In the 5,000 metres Ward won by 12 yards from Lefebvre in 14min. 48.2sec. It was a very interesting race. Parker, our second stringer, had a stitch with two laps to go, and Ward had to battle it out with the two Frenchmen.

The crowd cheered their men on frantically, but Ward never altered his beautiful stride and refused to be disturbed. In the last 80 yards he came away, and there was no doubt about the result.

I must not forget the good work carried on in the hurdles by Thornton, who beat Matheotte, the Frenchman, in 15sec. dead. White, the Army man, was timed to do 15.4sec., the same as Matheotte, but he hit his last hurdle and on the finer discrimination of the judges just lost second place.

The last event of the day was the relay. We had already won the match, but there was plenty of excitement at the end. Britain's team of Alford, Holmes, Page and Roberts, winning in 3min. 27.3sec., as compared with France's time of 3min. 29.0sec.

BROWN SMASHES RECORD

A. G. K. Brown set up a new Canadian record for the quarter-mile when he won this event for Oxford and Cambridge in 48.4-10sec. during an athletic contest against an Eastern Canadian team at Montreal. Oxford and Cambridge won the match by 11 events to 2. Though he missed his train from London by three minutes and had an exciting rush to reach the ground in time for his race, J. V. Powell recorded a brilliant win for the London A. C. in the half-mile and gained the W. Alexander Cup for the best performance of the afternoon at the Birchfield Harriers' Diamond Jubilee meeting at Birmingham. Being his third victory in the race he won outright the "Ansell" Cup, but generously returned it to the promoting club to be put up as a perpetual trophy.

Prior to Powell's arrival at the ground Fred Wolf had gained 6 points for the L.A.C. in the Wad-drove Trophy Inter-club competition by finishing second to H. C. Winkerson (Highgate) in the 100 yards and in the same position in the "quarter" to F. R. March, the Midland champion.

Ten teams competed in the two-mile team race won by Belgrave, with Birchfield second and Poly, third. "Lefty" Hughes, of Reading, won by 25 yards from C. K. Allen (Highgate) in 9min. 32.1-5sec., with R. Belgrave, at their first appearance in the competition, tied with L.A.C. with 12 points each for the Wad-drove Trophy. Birchfield were third with 10 points.

Insurance A. A. regained the Champions Trophy with a total of 76 points at the City and Hospitals meeting, staged at Amber Court London Business Houses (holders) being runners-up with 55 points.

burn, for without his guiding hand the Australians failed, for the first time to play as a team. They have run two and often three teams and in handicap polo they have swept the board. Their list of successes, the result of a carefully thought-out plan and the tremendous keenness of their captain, Mr. Keith Rous, is extraordinary, probably a record. It includes the King's Coronation Cup, the Beaumont Cup, the Beaumont Handicap Cup, the Bhopal Cup, the Sutton Smith Cup, the Beaumont Junior Championship, the Ladies' Nomination Challenge Cup, the Junior Colts Cup, the Novices Cup, the Beaumont Handicap Cup, the Beaumont Handicap Cup, and the Beaumont Handicap Cup.

And of the players themselves: the outstanding figure has been Mr. Gerald Bolding. He is a brilliant striker—"that's not a goal it's an acute angled cannon ball." I heard said of an incredible shot of his from near the boards—a brilliant horseman and a splendid polo tactician. He has clearly been the brain of the Jaguars side, and to my mind where his predominance appears is in his acute judgment of pace. Of the other first-flighters that artist in polo, Captain Butler, has not always been fit but he has showed us some surprising good polo: Captain Guinness excelled on two or three occasions; Hanut Singh was on the whole disappointing, and Mr. Hughes definitely so. Of the soldier players we probably did not see the best of Captain Butler or Captain Hinde, both splendid team leaders; while Captain Dawson showed the greatest promise and Mr. Horsburgh Porter and Mr. Hamilton Russell seemed the best of the subalterns. Actually the best game in the Inter-Regimental was the

Wooderson's Great Run At Ibrox

JUST MISSES A WORLD RECORD

Before 50,000 wildly enthusiastic spectators, Sydney Wooderson, the English mile champion, broke both the British and the Scottish all-comers' records for three-quarters of a mile at the Rangers' F.C. sports in Glasgow on Aug. 7.

The Blackheath Harrier's time of 3 min. 0.0 sec. was only three-tenths of a second short of the world's record, which he would most assuredly have beaten but for the adverse effect of a miniature gale.

Records toppled over by this wonderful feat of running pace were Jack Lovelock's British figures of 3 min. 2.2sec., made at Stamford Bridge in 1932, and the Scottish all-comers' best of 3 min. 3.8sec., created by Ray Watson (U.S.A.) at the Rangers' sports in 1928.

Wooderson conceded starts as follows: R. H. Thomas (10), B. C. Eccles (12), F. Close (10), and E. E. Lansdale (21), while Bob Graham, the Scottish champion, accompanied him on the scratch mark.

HE HAD NO ONE TO PULL HIM OUT

It was afterwards agreed that the starts should have been at least doubled.

Wooderson gained about eight yards on Lansdale in the first quarter-mile, the backmarker's time at this point being 58.2sec.

Round the next lap Wooderson made the opposition look insignificant, coming into the lead at the bell in 1min. 58.7sec. He should have had at least three men ahead of him to pull him out over the last quarter.

Out on his own, the champion swept round on to the back straight, and, moving freely down wind, reached the "furlong to go" mark still inside his world-record schedule. All went well until he hit the home stretch, where the wind was blowing at its hardest.

Wooderson still had plenty of strength left, but his frail 6½st. was a poor match for the gale, and he lost the vital fractions that separated his run from Ladoumègue's world's best of 3 min. 0.6sec.

BOWLS TOURNEY

Results Of 4th Round Singles Matches

The following games were played in the fourth round of the singles lawn bowls championship yesterday: G. H. Sheriff, of the Kowloon Bowling Green, created a mild surprise when he beat A. W. Grimmit, the 1934 triple title holder, by a convincing score of 21 to 10 on the 19th head. On the Police green.

A. R. Dallah, Indian bowler who on Monday beat A. E. Coates (holder), went down to S. Randle, of the Civil Service, 21 to 10. It took them 21 heads to decide the winner.

U. M. Omar, a former champion, defeated T. Armstrong, of the Kowloon Bowling Green Club, 23 to 16 on the 25th head at the Kowloon C.C. green. The match between A. S. Russell and J. Cook was not played.

At the Kowloon B.G.C., H. A. Alves, of the Club de Recreio, beat H. Overy, of the Kowloon C.C. 23 to 19 on the 26th head, and on the same green L. F. Xavier defeated J. V. Ramsey 21 to 20 in an exciting game which took 27 heads to decide.

Twelfth versus Tenth affair in the first round at Fildworth. The sub-alterns' final showed more individual brilliance on the part of the 12th Lancer team than the final of the Inter-Regimental itself.

Of the young players only two stand out as possible internationals. Mr. Skene, who may well be forgotten as I believe he is not to appear in London polo next year, is clearly an international No. 1. And Mr. Lakin, given a season in America or India, might train on to play behind him. One can only hope that they will get more chances than our seven weeks' season normally affords.

ESCAPE FROM SUDDEN DEATH

This poem was written by Julian Bell, whose death in the Spanish War was reported recently

BUT the grey skeleton may stand more close
Than sixty years a-cupboard; flying chance
May jolt her shuttles to a swifter dance.
And Death be nearer than we could suppose.
The other day I saw his face,
True but for half a moment's space,
But now a shadow's at my back, and grows
As if a guttering candle burned apace.
Thinking of you, it had been hard to go
To the damp worms, and solitary sleep;
But were you gone? How little I've to keep
You in my mind. How little do I know,
As ploughman near some ancient mound
Have an old treasure found.
Straight buried it again, and doing so
Scarce called to mind gold glimmering under-ground.

A handful of poor memories, there is all:
Oh, well enough, if only I not know
The more profound, hidden extent of you.
My knowledge mocks whatever I recall.
Could we but snatch a hasty spring,
And snare the god, not yet a-wing,
Hear nightingales before the cuckoos call,
Hear to brave primroses the skylarks sing,
Then let us fill a summer with delight
Foretelling slower time, and swifter fate,
And make the flowery pomp our subject state,
And garland memories both for day and night.
Pan and Apollo let us pray
For the wild rose and wreathed bay,
And, when we've spent our gifts in the gods'
sight,
Look back upon a happy yesterday.

PIECRUST CIVILISATION

A DISTINGUISHED archaeologist

has been holding a careful in-quest on the death of civilisation. The efficient Coroner is Mr. Stanley Casson, a well-known Oxford Don, and his exciting verdict is embodied in a thrilling volume, "Progress and Catastrophe: An Anatomy of Human Adventure." Quite impartially I commend it to anyone sufficiently interested in the destiny of the human race to devote a few hours to that fascinating theme.

There is a widespread popular superstition, fervently shared in even the best democratic circles though long ago satirised by Mr. G. B. Shaw, that the history of mankind on this globe has been one slow but steady advance from primeval brutality, through the Dark and Middle Ages, towards the reforging light of twentieth century Western civilisation; that the minds of men have broadened with the process of the suns towards what Alfred Lord Tennyson called "one increasing purpose."

Mr. Casson effectually slays that jargon-work at the outset. He tells us that progress, which made greater strides when men talked less about it, does in fact occur on occasions, say, nobody except a fool would deny. But that it is cumulative and inevitable no one can accept.

Almost at a Standstill

We throw a chest, and pat ourselves on the back, about our wonderful modern discoveries, mechanical and other, and Mr. Casson, regarding the aeons through the impartial spectacles of archaeology, finds comparatively little evidence of human progress in the last two thousand years, and no boasted modern discovery even comparable with "the genius who first connected sparks with fire or associated copulation with childbirth for the first time." Attentively to ponder these scientific assertions may be as intellectually bracing as a cold douche.

It is an engrossing experience to follow Mr. Casson on his shrewd researches into the dim and distant past. No Sherlock Holmes fiction can furnish anything like the meticulous skill and courageous intuition that these archaeological sleuths display in unravelling, amidst the dust of unnumbered centuries, the faint clues of human history.

Yet I doubt whether Mr. Casson's book will equal the best-seller circulation of the latest cheap detective thriller. It is comic what the groundlings miss in art, literature, and life. People will queue up for some lady novelist's callow improprieties who would shun full-blooded old Sen-tentius like a plague. Perhaps it is just as well. But certainly the High Browers can afford a quiet chuckle over the imbecilities of the Thick Ears.

Progress Intermittent
The oldest detected experiment in civilisation, erroneously called Progress, was made by the Sumerians in the Tigris-Euphrates valley. It endured, before being extinguished by the Mongol invasion of three centuries after the Arab conquest of Persia, for four thousand years. Compare that security of tenure with the eight hundred years of Greece, the nine hundred of Rome, and the thousand of Byzantium. Mr. Casson shows us how twice the march of civilisation has been arrested and put back by a Dark Age, first after the collapse of the Hittite Empire, partly due to neglect of sea power, by the way—and then after the fall of the Roman Empire.

By AN OLD STAGER

a sad testimony to the decay that has set in. The twentieth century, in fact, reverts to the Bronze Age, only without its gigantic up-lift.

Second in antiquity only to the Sumerian is the Egyptian civilisation. Yet it has bequeathed us practically nothing of value, and its decay came, despite an ideal geographical cradle, from within and not without. When the Greeks first went to Egypt, declares Mr. Casson, whelmed by its multiplicity of gods, castes, and ceremonies, what they really found was a nation of fellahin ruled with a rod of iron by a Society of Antiquaries!

Britain's Long Peace

Our own place in the pageant of the past is vividly stated by Mr. Casson. "From A.D. 100 to A.D. 400 all British except in the north was as pleasant and peaceful a land as it is to-day. Never since have we had a Pax Britannica of this kind that lasted for the vast space of three hundred years! But by A.D. 500 it had all vanished, and the country had reverted to a condition which it had never perhaps seen before." Yet the preceding standard of public security had been greater than at any period in British history before the middle of the nineteenth century.

And so we come to our author's verdict on contemporary symptoms. I am not quite convinced that this is as purely scientific as his reconstruction of the past. But it is impressively sincere, and certainly based on close scientific analogy.

He reads all around us in Europe a hint at the reappearance of an age of Retrogression. The centrifugal movement of State away from a common ideal of life is the modern disaster. The first step on this decline was the World War. "With the dead who perished in that cataclysm, there perished also the major part of international morality."

Dictator states preach war now, not as a vital defence against barbarian assault, but as a means in itself of curing internal disease. The deliberate segregation of men into groups between which communication is as deliberately denied is "a fantastic move back to the most primitive conditions."

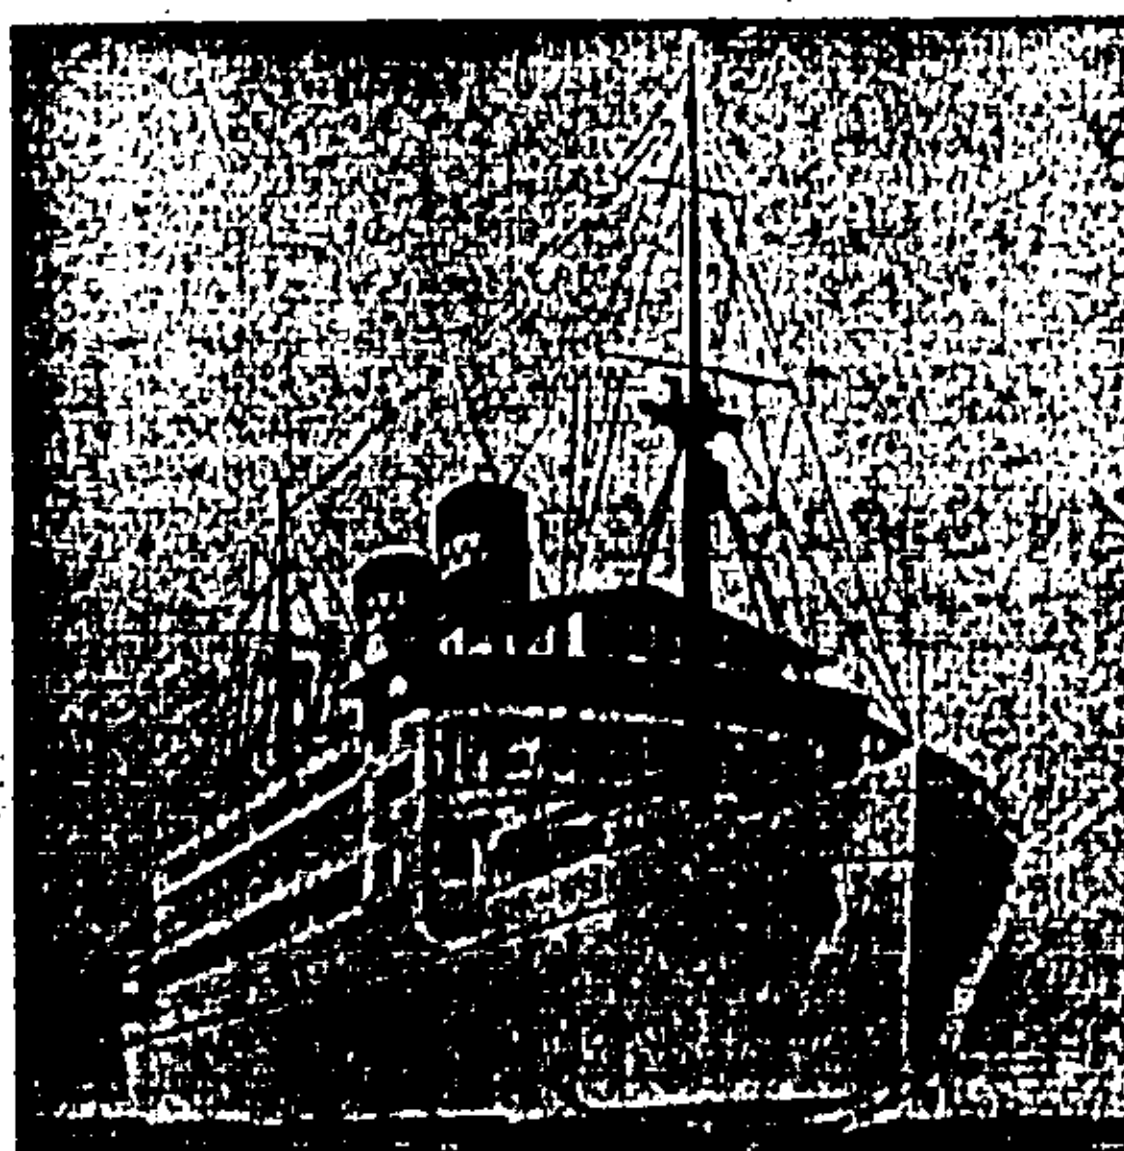

His general diagnosis of the symptoms of civilisation's breakdown in any age is the failure of moral and material progress to keep equal pace. I confess, if this diagnosis is correct, as it very well may be, our present-day symptoms strongly suggest the fatal inequality. The conflict of Fascism and Communism within national States is a normal development in the process of disintegration. "The supposition that ensues takes the form of demagogues and dictators."

A Downward Trend

"The unhappy League of Nations," says Mr. Casson, "failed almost at birth to justify itself, and grow to maturity, through the inner wickedness of man, still apparently ignorant that to survive he must combine." He tells us that America departed from the venture through stupidity, Germany and Japan through malice, and Italy "remains only because she believes she can do more damage inside than outside." He thinks civilisation is not on the brink of collapse, but has already some years ago collapsed. "I wonder exactly how long it will take us to awake to the fact that before our very eyes the world we lived in our youth has passed away, and with it the main props of civilisation."

So there you have the net result of this scientific crowner's quest. Yet Mr. Casson is not a complete Jeremiah. He drops in the very last sentence of his remarkable book just one tiny crumb of comfort. "Consciousness of the position alone may contribute to stopping the downward trend of modern civilisation." A courageous cynic might perhaps prefer to scrap this desperate brand of civilisation, and look forward to another aeon rebuilding a better. Or would he really be a Superman?

Futile Hunt For Work

Roosevelt Cannot Help Marchers

Washington, Aug. 24. The Government can give no help to the Workers' Alliance.

To-day 2,500 bedraggled men, women and children encamped on the mud flats near the Lincoln Memorial for the past 48 hours, delivered a letter to President Roosevelt, asking him to use his executive powers to reinstate former W. P. A. workers who could not find private employment. The whole party marched through the capital streets in an orderly procession, four abreast, waving the blue Workers' Alliance flags and singing their union songs, on the way to the White House.

An automobile hulled the marchers in their way, however, and diverted them to the Labour Department auditorium where they heard a message from the President:

"I regret it is not within our power to grant your request."

The marchers plan to disperse to their homes.—United Press.

Income Tax Yield

Big Increase Shown In Britain

London, Aug. 26. An increase of over 12 per cent. in the yield of income tax last week, compared with the corresponding week of 1936, is a feature of the Exchequer returns, which show that total ordinary revenue amounts to £245,904,532, compared with £230,225,519 at the corresponding date of last year. The week's total ordinary revenue, at £17,852,468, was £643,468 in excess of the total for the corresponding week in last year.

Total expenditure, less self-balancing items, was £322,311,833, compared with £300,340,012 at the corresponding date of 1936.

Floating debt outstanding on August 21 was £884,535,000, which shows an increase of £186,405,000 since March 31 and compares with £823,225,000 in August, 1936.—British Wireless.

BRITISH MOTOR INDUSTRY RECORD PRODUCTION FIGURES

London, Aug. 24. The total output of the British motor industry for the nine months ending June 30 was 308,034 private cars and taxis and 91,125 commercial vehicles, representing an 11 per cent. increase in output on the corresponding period to June, 1936, which was itself a record.

These figures reflect not only highly prosperous conditions for the motor industry itself but for the country generally.—British Wireless.

Italian Air Victories

French Concerned Over Position

Paris, Aug. 24. The Italian victories in the international air race threaten to upset the forty-hour week in French aviation plants.

Le Temps has demanded "an objective inquiry into the state of our aviation." It draws attention to the point that the Government is solely responsible, due to the nationalisation programme.

The Navy official, M. Cesar Campinchi, in a speech at St. Nazaire, drew attention to the fact that Italian plane manufacturers were aided by a sixty-nine-hour week, whereas French production has been slowed down, leading to the belief that the Cabinet will make an effort to secure an agreement with the trade unions for rendering possible a longer week in aviation plants.

The press generally states that the French air position has been "badly compromised" as a result of the outcome of the air race.—United Press.

VISITORS FLOOD BRITAIN

THOUSANDS VISIT OLD COUNTRY

London, Aug. 24. Figures of the number of foreign visitors to Britain for July, issued by the Home Office, continue to show an increase over last year.

Excluding numerous visitors from the Dominions, whose arrivals are not recorded at ports, and week-end and day excursionists from France and Belgium, there were 68,769 holiday visitors to Britain in July and 8,580 visitors on business, a total of 77,349 and total increase of 3,000 over July last year.

The principal increase was in holiday visitors from the United States, who numbered 25,362 against 22,524 in July last.—British Wireless.

OLYMPIA RADIO EXHIBITION

FIVE MILES OF STANDS

London, Aug. 24. Hundreds of workmen will be engaged all night in putting the finishing touches to the Radio Exhibition, which opens at the Olympia to-morrow morning.

Worldwide reception and television are features which will be emphasised by exhibitors on five miles of stands showing 5,000 sets of which 3,000 will be "all wave" and 25 television receivers. Television will be demonstrated in 14 theatres.—British Wireless.

BRITAIN TO PROTEST

London, Aug. 24. The British steamer Noemi Julia, which was bombed by two planes yesterday off Ajaccio, has reached a French port undamaged. British naval authorities in the Mediterranean have been instructed to protest to the insurgent authorities at Palma against the attack.—Reuter Bulletin.

FOREIGNERS READY TO FIGHT

Grave Concern Felt For International Settlement's Safety

ALL AMERICANS WARNED FOR ACTIVE SERVICE; BRITISH ORDER GUNS FROM H. K.

May Have To Face Desperate Chinese Army In Retreat

(SPECIAL TO "TELEGRAPH")

Shanghai, Aug. 25.

Continuing grave concern for the fate of the International Settlement in the event that withdrawing forces try to rush the barricades and attempt to force an entrance, is causing the foreign authorities, quietly and effectively, without "getting the wind up," generally to take all precautions.

At the suggestion of the U.S. Marines' commanding officer all able-bodied Americans not at present performing emergency police or military duty have been approached regarding their willingness to shoulder arms and take their places in the American defence sector, which is 7,000 zig-zagging yards long. It would be most difficult to hold against a desperate rush of troops facing annihilation on all sides, unless every available effective stands firm behind the sandbags and barbed wire.

The British authorities are also gravely concerned for the Settlement in the event of the Japanese "big push" confronting the concessions with the necessity of repulsing retreating Chinese. Brigadier A. P. D. Telfer-Smollett, commandant of the British forces, the strongest in Shanghai, after a conference with other foreign commanders, has ordered artillery from Hongkong. The number of batteries and the size of guns sought is being kept a closely guarded secret.

GREAT JAPANESE OFFENSIVE OPENS

PLANS FOR GENERAL EVACUATION

Plans for a general American evacuation if the event proves necessary are now completed. All district captains are responsible for rounding up the nationals of their areas and reporting to the American Emergency Committee. Mr. R. T. McDonnell, former U.S. Army officer and head of a leading engineering firm, is chairman of this Committee and is working day and night.

STILL HOLDING LINES

At 9.45 a.m. to-day the Chinese were still holding their lines despite an intensive Japanese naval bombardment. Aerial bombs had set the picturesque village of Lotien in flames.

As the Japanese advance they are methodically mopping up throughout the areas occupied.

The villages of Tazang and Chenju are the immediate Japanese objectives, as they were in the latter phase of the 1932 fighting. Another column is attempting to advance up the Shanghai-Woosung highway.

Artillery, landed from transports, is now lumbering into action and unlimbering for a barrage before the infantry is ordered to charge the Chinese lines.

PRELUDE TO BATTLE

As a prelude to the big battle, the Japanese air force is operating in relays against the very strong Chinese lines around Chenju. The severest aerial bombardment has been carried out there, planes diving well under 1,000 feet before losing their bombs and using their machine-guns on the trenches. The Chinese are answer-

China Ready To Withdraw From S'hai

Onus Of Refusal Rests On Tokyo

London, Aug. 24.

China has notified Great Britain of her willingness to accept in principle the British proposals for the mutual withdrawal of Chinese and Japanese troops, including Japanese warships, from the immediate vicinity of the French Concession of Shanghai. Japan's final reply has not yet been received, but the British Government has up to now been deeply disappointed at Tokyo's negative attitude.

Japanese circles in London believe that with the aid of the newly landed reinforcements their troops in Here is a graphic picture from Shanghai showing the scene after recent explosions from bombs which fell in the Settlement. Stretcher cases are seen being handled on the Bund near the Public Gardens.

COSTLY ADVANCE TOWARD NANKOW

HEAVY CASUALTIES AS JAPANESE ATTACK MOUNTAIN POSTS

Peiping, Aug. 25.

Five divisions of Central Government troops defending the Nankow-Huailai area are now in a precarious position following the capture of Kalgan on August 22 by a fast column of the Kwantung Army from Dolonor. This column is now reported to be pushing rapidly towards Hsuanhua in order to attack the Central Government troops from the rear.

A Japanese spokesman claims that the Japanese have won successes in the Nankow Pass area, where the main offensive has allegedly reached the Great Wall through the hills west of and parallel to the pass. The advance was only accomplished after very heavy hand-to-hand fighting, in driving rain, up and down the mountain-sides.

Casualties are believed to have been very high, owing to the continued arrival of Japanese wounded at Peiping.

The Japanese claim to be driving the Chinese from the Great Wall into the Huailai Plain. However, a United Press correspondent on Monday observed heavy fighting within five miles west and east of Nankow Pass itself, along the foothills, indicating the Japanese announcement of successes is possibly premature.

Prison Delivery

Meanwhile, at Peiping itself Chinese plainclothes men synchronized an attack on a large prison outside the Tehsheng Gate, North Peiping, with a revolt inside and succeeded in freeing a large number of convicts who have been armed from the prison arsenal. Later, sporadic fighting broke out over a large area north-west and north of Peiping. Yenching University residents reported fighting in all directions all night long.

Foreign observers believe the Japanese will soon dominate the Peiping-Suiyuan railway to Kalgan, wiping out the Chinese detachments along it, unless the Chinese scatter to the hills and adopt guerilla tactics necessitating a campaign of many months' duration. It is pointed out that if the Chinese dynamite the main Chinglungchiao tunnel at the summit of Nankow Pass they can delay the use of the railway by the

Tsingtao, Aug. 25. ITALIAN TROOPS COMING

London, Aug. 25. The Daily Telegraph correspondent in Rome states that the 1st Battalion of the Royal Grenadiers of Savoy have left Addis Ababa for Massawa to embark for Shanghai to reinforce the Italian contingents there. The extent of the loss of life and property in Shanghai is seriously preoccupying the Italian Government and business circles. Whereas great sympathy was felt with Japan when she joined Germany in the anti-Bolshevik Pact, the Japanese campaign against China has come as a painful surprise. It is feared Japan will find the Chinese adventure a tremendous strain and that Soviet Russia will grow relatively stronger.—Reuter.

ISLANDERS REVOLT

White Men Flee From Inagua

London, Aug. 24.

Fourteen British and American refugees from the island of Inagua, in the Bahamas, have arrived at Cuba in a motor-boat, almost naked, having used their clothes for sails when the motor broke down.

The fugitives, who are at present under the care of the Cuban authorities, carried arms for defence. They comprise the British High Commissioner of Inagua, an American named Erickson and twelve others, who were forced to leave the island after troubles in which the local Resident was killed and the Residency, the wireless station and other buildings burned.

The troubles were learned of in a wireless report from an official party sent from Nassau to Inagua to investigate matters on the receipt of a wireless SOS from the island.—Reuter.

MERCILESS SHELLING OF S'HAJ

Chinese Retake Lotien In Woosung Battle

Shanghai, Aug. 25 (8.53 a.m.).

Shanghai passed a comparatively quiet night. It was broken only by the occasional boom of gunfire, but the usual aerial activity is expected this morning.

Japanese warships opened the day with the usual shelling of the Chinese positions in Pootung. This operation has now become a daily fore-runner to major land hostilities.

No Chinese activity is discernible at this early hour but after last night's visitation from a solitary Chinese plane the Idzumo, the Japanese flagship, has again changed her position in the Whangpoo, moving a little down-river.

The noise of other planes overhead, presumed to be Chinese, was heard by many residents during the night, but there was no bombing. It was one of the most peaceful nights since the outbreak of the fighting.—Reuter.

Lotien Retaken

Shanghai, Aug. 25.

The Chinese military authorities announced this morning that the defending troops in the Woosung area had recaptured Lotien following a bitter clash.

It was stated that 700 Japanese broke through the Chinese lines at this point earlier in the prolonged operations, piercing the trench system near Chuen-shan-chen and reaching Lotien by way of the Mulso Bridge.

The communique adds Lotien was lost as a result of weakness in the Chinese lines, from which troops had been sent to reinforce hard-pressed units in the Lion Forest. Later, the Chinese returned to Lotien in force.

and drove the Japanese as far as Chuen-shan-chen.

Very severe fighting continues.—United Press.

Few Troops Landed

It is authoritatively stated here that word has come from Shanghai that the troops landed up to yesterday by the Japanese around Woosung did not total more than 6,000.

Moreover, it is stated on the best authority that in spite of denials, a Japanese gunboat was sunk in yesterday's operations off Woosung and a destroyer badly damaged.

Concentrating On Woosung

Shanghai, Aug. 25.

While particularly heavy firing raged around Shanghai to-day, especially in the Woosung sector, the International Settlement has been comparatively quiet.

Diverting attention from Pootung, the Japanese warships in the Whangpoo during the afternoon concentrated their fire on the Chinese lines on the Shanghai side of the river, and shelling was still progressing late last night.

The first sign of Chinese aerial activity occurred in Shanghai to-day when a solitary plane hummed unseen over the Japanese flagship Idzumo about 10 p.m. The warship fired very lights and opened with her anti-aircraft guns, but without any apparent effect. The Chinese visitor dropped two bombs, which fell somewhere in the eastern district with heavy explosions.

Meanwhile, the Japanese officially announced that their machines had bombed Ningpo and Anking, capital of Anhui province during the day, inflicting "serious losses."—Reuter.

Query and Answer

"J. F. D."

"I have a purple birthmark, about the size of a two-shilling piece, at the side of my cheek. How can I get rid of it?"

MARKS of this description cannot be treated at home. You should apply to your local hospital as the removal of birthmarks must be undertaken by a medical man.

R. S. M.

"I am terribly keen to take up tap dancing this autumn, but a friend tells me that it is very exhausting and far too strenuous after a day's office work. Also that it enlarges the thigh muscles. Is this true?"

TAP DANCING is rather tiring at first, but it is harder on the ankles than on the thighs. You will find that your ankles ache until they get accustomed to the movements. But, as you only intend taking classes twice a week, and as you are sitting all day in an office, you should not find it too tiring. And it is very good exercise.

It is always possible to miss a lesson if your day's work was particularly tiring.

"Fair and Forty"

"Will you tell me what shade of powder, lipstick and rouge to use?"

Don't Make "Nerves" An Excuse

SO many of us complain of "nerves" nowadays, and no wonder in these modern times, with all their stress and strain, buses roaring and electric drills throbbling, and everybody in a break-neck hustle.

Some women, however, make "nerves" an excuse for shirking duties or for covering what is often mere laziness or lack of self-control. For example, a tiring day in the house often ends in a display of bad temper at night, and that is put down to "nerves."

Some women complain that children "get on their nerves" and dread having the whole family home for the holidays, even if the family is a small one. They remind me of the days when our young family came home for the holidays. There were eight of us, and Mother welcomed all eight at once with a smile and a ham-and-plum-cake tea. It would never have occurred to her to make our holidays an excuse for complaining and "nerves." And Victorian children were not nearly so angelic or well-disciplined as we moderns imagine!

The people who work in a large city have perhaps more reason to complain of "nerves." But they, too, should remember how much their surroundings have improved in the last half-century. Modern buildings are scientifically ventilated and everything is planned hygienically. But not so many years ago offices were dark dens.

If the six o'clock rush hour is a strenuous, nerve-racking business, would you prefer the old two-hours journey back into the suburbs in a "jiggerty-joggerty" horse bus? "Nerves" when they are genuine are a terrible thing indeed, and sufferers from them need every care and sympathy, but there are far too many people complaining of their "nerves" who would do better to give themselves a good mental shaking and make up their minds to exercise a little self-control.

Mary Bridge

I have rather pale blue eyes, fair skin and fair hair, now turning 'mousy,' and I'm forty."

ONE of the rules for make-up is to match the powder to the tone of the skin; lipstick and rouge should tone in with the natural colouring.

Some beauty salons use powder with a certain amount of pink in its composition, such as peach for fair skins inclined to be sallow, and richer or natural for those with a reddish tendency.

You may use a rose lipstick or rouge or something less red, such as coral, if you prefer it. A rather less emphasised make-up is usually more becoming to those who have left the mid-thirties behind.

At night, make-up should be stronger and brighter.

BEAUTY problems — that's the most engrossing subject for women, and many of the letters which come from readers are concerned with it.

What shall they do when on the beach? Some want to get brown; others wish to avoid it. They get sun scorched. Their noses shine. The glare hurts their eyes. Whether they are taking hiking or camping holidays, spending a week or so by the sea, or touring abroad, they all want to look their best.

One letter from a young girl sounded rather pathetic. "Last year I seemed to look all wrong by the sea," she wrote. "The other girls in the party had managed to get just the right shades of powder and make-up and I hadn't."

From that I gathered she had been completely overshadowed by her companions. Perhaps she had gone holiday-making looking too towny.

White skins and blush rose cheeks do look strangely incongruous in swim suits. Too ethereal. The open air and outdoor sports call for something more robust. And so the question that crops up each summer has arisen again — to tan or not to tan? A certain amount of tan there should be, although the deep browns are out of fashion.

I've been studying some of these tan-producers and they are of two kinds. The first is made to encourage a becoming tone without coarsening or damaging the skin. The second is for those who do not want to tan naturally at all, but who wish to look the part when engaged in outdoor activities.

One of the latter preparations is versatile, because you can control the exact depth of tone. A single application for a creamy beige. Two or more for a coppery colour. It is waterproof, so it won't come off when bathing. But it can be removed easily with a special cream, and there you are, beautifully fresh and white underneath it without a trace of tan.

AMONG the several handbags, made of soft calf brown red lipsticks and two cream jars, also a small prepared for the summer of 1937 mirror with a little purse on a chain.

some clever way it seems to blend into a natural lip colour when applied. The cream rouge which goes with it looks very brown in the pot, but goes redder when it is on the cheeks.

One day I was discussing the new unpowdered complexion. It is having a certain vogue amongst the very young girls in America, who like to look as if their faces had been well scrubbed with soap and left shiny. It is not very popular here.

Whether you are a girl working in an office, or the mother of a family working in the home, there are things that should be packed in your Beauty Box to take with the holiday luggage.

You may be conservative about cosmetics, or crave for the very latest things out. It doesn't matter. You must have cleansing cream or lotion, foundation for powder, either liquid or cream or one like I tried recently in block form, which, by the way, is convenient for packing as it doesn't take up much room and can't get broken.

Be careful about the powder. Don't take away too pale a shade. After a day or so in the sun the skin will darken and, like the girl who wrote that letter, you won't look "right."

THERE should be deodorant powder, and a powder which can be sprinkled on the feet to prevent them from getting tired, burning and uncomfortable. In the beauty box you will want a little antiseptic, like iodine. Buy this in "pencil" form. Also, if you are going into the country or abroad, don't forget some preparation which will combat the onslaughts of mosquitoes.

An extremely simple remedy which will lessen the irritation if a mosquito or gnats has already attacked you is a lump of ordinary washing soda. Moisten the bite and rub it with the soda.

The medical part of the outfit I leave to you. But don't forget a small supply of your pet physics. A Beauty Box can be bought very cheaply. Rather attractive little containers in coloured enamel, holding two jars and two bottles. For a little more, there are three jars and three bottles and for the even more expensive you get three small enamel boxes included. These you fill with your own special creams and lotions.

Somewhere else I saw the most attractive leather boxes for a guinea. In the larger sizes this has a powder box as well as the usual three boxes and the same number of cream jars.

THE latest of all beauty-box designs is like a handbag, made of soft calf leather. There are three bottles and two cream jars, also a small prepared for the summer of 1937 mirror with a little purse on a chain.

UNTHINKABLE!

Of course you would not give your baby a cigar or adult food because you know babies require special care and treatment. That is why you spend so much time in the preparation of his special food. Yet when baby's system is upset and he is troubled with colic, diarrhea, sour stomach, indigestion or constipation, are you careful to use only medicine that has been made especially for him? Castoria is the ideal remedy for your child because it has been prepared especially for infants and children. It is mild, pleasant-tasting and easy to take. The next time your baby is upset by some simple child ailment, use Castoria, safe for even the newborn infant.

YOURSELF AND YOUR HOUSE

Joan's Table Talk

IT is unfortunate, but true, that many women find their skins marred by open pores. Removing the cause is, of course, the first essential; rich foods, or sitting too long in a hot bath, are both "evils" which should be remedied.

As to the best treatment, cleansing the face with a lemon preparation, then rinsing in cold water, and patting the skin dry is generally satisfactory.

When enlarged pores appear by the side of the nose only, they should be cleansed at night with lemon cream, washed with a skin tonic, and a special cream rubbed into the open pores and left on all night.

Use tonic for the morning wash, patting the skin dry before making up in the usual way.

Points About Powder

THERE are still many women who choose the wrong powder for their type of skin, despite the fact that so many different textures in powders are now produced. Every skin is entered for.

A general rule is to use a well-sifted powder on a fine skin. Coarser powder clings to a coarser skin.

Any skin at all oily should be covered with a powder noted for its astringent powers. Such powders are, indeed, easier to obtain than powders which will not cake on a dry skin. Yet these powders are also prepared nowadays.

Tinted Kitchen Towels

BATHROOM towels, artistically coloured, are being bought to match the bathroom walls.

But, in the kitchen, new towels form a vivid contrast from the colours already in the room. Run-ner towels made from Turkish towelling glow with orange, primrose or green.

Linen towels, also of the runner type, are checked in two or three colours in large or small sizes. Or they are gaily spotted.

White tea towels have bright borders. Squares of yellow or green are seen at either end.

Flowers On The Table

ONE can often pick up tips on how to decorate a table with flowers from the expert. A prize winning table at a recent exhibition showed a centre basket filled with well-spaced flowers in shades of yellow, and sprays of foliage extended across the cloth. At the corners of the table, small dishes held single flower heads.

Smaller, and simpler arrangements were also shown. For instance, single blossoms surrounded by leaves stood in small vases near each corner of a refectory table. In the centre a circular two-inch trough held a spray of flowers clipped by a special holder to one side.

It was noticeable that dark flowers were put into black vases while pale flowers stood in crystal containers.

For Golfers

JEWELLERY is specialised these days. At least, some intriguing designs have been made for the golfer.

There are fancy wristlets in bright colours which have slots for tees.

For tee-holders are not quite so vivid because, apparently, tasteful choice is to have them to match one's suit. Green, scarlet and brown are usual colours.

A semi-circular piece of crystal with a round watch set in the centre is finished with a leather strap, and is, again, intended as a fob watch for a golfer.

Holds Beauty Requisites

EVERY woman who bathes likes to take her beauty outfit with her, and one very convenient solution is to make a hold-all to suit one's own special needs.

A strip of American cloth in a jaunty colour to match one's bathing suit or cap is just right for a roll-up hold-all. It should certainly be lined with oiled silk. Then pieces of the American cloth are sewn to make pockets inside to hold the little bottles of lotion, tin of cream, the cotton wool, hairpins and clips.

DO YOUNG DOCTORS KNOW THEIR JOB?

'I Am Uneasy About Them

—B.M.A. President

Belfast, July 29.

The newly qualified G.P.—the general practitioner whose business it is to cope with your ailments and mine—was criticised at the British Medical Association's conference here to-night.

Questions about his ability to practise immediately on qualifying were asked; doubts about his intentions to continue his studies were raised; and the new president, Professor R. J. Johnstone, the Belfast gynaecologist, himself said he was "uneasy" over the young doctor.

He suggested that a panel practice might be giving him an assured income too soon and taking away his incentive to study.

Said Professor Johnstone: "Some day we may see the medical practitioner going back to his old school, or to another school, for a month, for three months, even for a sabbatical (seventh) year, both to learn and to teach."

"But leaving aside the difficult question of interference by one practitioner with the patients of another, there are still many administrative problems to be overcome before that can happen."

"With good will on both sides this should not be insoluble; but it will, I am afraid, be a long time before administrators may be brought to believe that a panel of doctors is just as efficient and reliable as, and gives no more trouble than, a whole-time office."

"Perhaps in the future all difficulties will be solved by the establishment of a State medical service. Like good democrats we shall always oppose it."

"Every fresh instalment of social and public health legislation, every new chapter opened in the volume of State control, brings us steadily nearer to the totalitarian ideal and when that has finally arrived we may say goodbye to the general practitioner as we know him."

"He is still with us, however, and how does he compare with his predecessor of a generation back?"

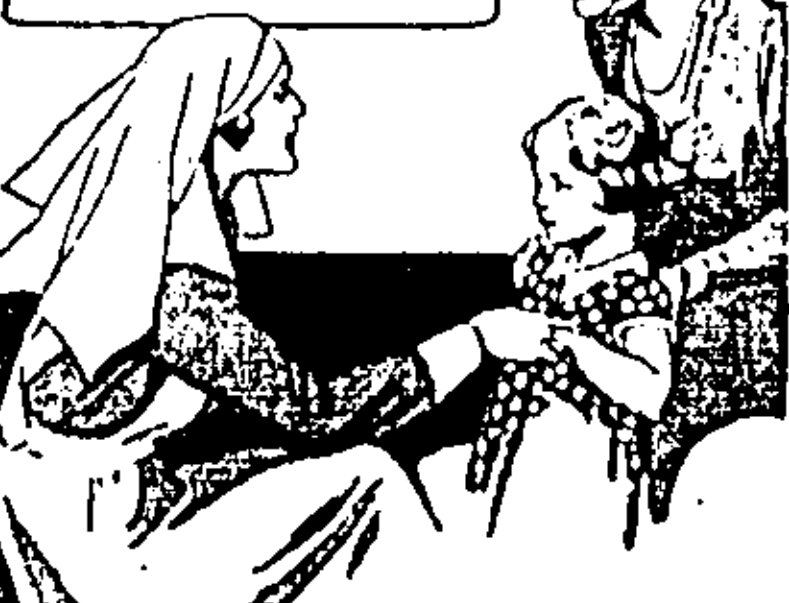

"His equipment is undoubtedly better, he has for the service of his patients a store of knowledge and an acquaintance with technical resources not even dreamed of when I was a medical student."

"But medical practice—and medical education—has its repellent side, even so-called and sometimes disgusting. I have no anxiety about our students."

"Their standard is as high as it ever was and they are getting and taking excellent training. But I do feel uneasy about the most important class in the profession, the young general practitioner in the twenties and the early thirties."

More criticism came from Dr. T. Craig, of Dudley when moving a resolution that no one passing his

"I'M WORRIED ABOUT WINNIE, NURSE. SHE EATS EACH MORNING TILL NIGHT. WHAT DO YOU ADVISE?"

"Why, the poor little thing is constipated. No wonder she's fretful. That is the chief thing a mother has to guard against, Mrs. Grant."

"Kiddies don't understand; they're so absorbed in their games, and often neglect Nature's call. Then they get bilious, lose their appetite and become irritable."

"Show me your tongue, Winnie. Yes, it is coated—a sure sign she's out of sorts. All she needs is 'California Syrup of Figs,' and she'll be as happy as a lark in the morning."

"You'll find it keeps the bowels regular, purifies the system and saves stomach upsets and biliousness. 'If children are to thrive and grow strong and keen witted, they must eat well and digest what they eat. There's no better way than the regular weekly dose of 'California Syrup of Figs.' All children love it."

"If I were you, I would send for a bottle now and give Winnie a dose at once."

"Be sure you insist on 'California Syrup of Figs,' Mrs. Grant. I am surprised that some mothers are ready to experiment with cheap and drastic preparations. It's such a pity they don't realize that 'California Syrup of Figs' is a perfectly safe children's laxative. I know myself how carefully and scientifically it is prepared."

Padre Reveals Marvels Of Spiritual Healing

Bradford, July 22.

THE Rev. Leslie D. Weatherhead, minister of the City Temple, London, to-day held the Methodist Conference here spellbound as he described a series of cases of spiritual healing.

After saying that silent prayer was offered every night at the City Temple for particular individuals, he gave the following instances as the result:—

"Incurable" Cured.—A young airman lying in St. Bartholomew's Hospital had been told his disease was incurable and there was no hope. They prayed for him on a number of Sunday evenings. Now he was back at work.

Young Mother Recovers.—A young expectant mother who was paralysed in both legs was told she would never be able to move her legs again, and would be unable to give birth to her child, her first baby, alive. Within two or three hours of their prayers she was walking in the wards, and later her baby was safely born.

Sleep Restored.—A young nurse had a temperature of 104 degrees and was unable to sleep without drugs. They prayed for her without her knowing. Her temperature came down to normal. She slept all night and took nourishment the next morning.

Mr. Weatherhead said he could cite 20 more cases during the past six months in which people had not had the faintest idea that prayer had been offered for them.

"BLIND LIFTED"
Among letters he had received testifying to the healing power of prayer was one from a woman who said she had been given up as hopelessly blind.

"At 7.30 last Sunday evening," ran the letter, "it was just as if a blind went up, and I saw and have continued to see."

"I might say," Mr. Weatherhead added, "that at 7.30 prayers were being lifted up by 2,500 people that the woman might recover."

CO-OPERATION
Mr. Weatherhead was presenting the report of a committee on spiritual healing. This recommended that experiments should be made to discover if possible to what extent help could be given to persons in trouble by use of religious ministrations and psychology through doctors and ministers working in co-operation.

To carry out the recommendations another committee was appointed, consisting of Sir Henry Brackenbury, vice-president, British Medical Association; Dr. Alfred Torrie, of Harley-street; Dr. W. F. Lofthouse, of Handsworth College; Dr. Eric S. Waterhouse, of Richmond College; the Rev. W. H. Beales, and Mr. Weatherhead.

Tell me, doctor... You know what children are—always falling and cutting their knees and grazing their hands. I don't regard such things as trifles: I had a young brother who died of blood-poisoning. Tell me, is there no efficient antiseptic I can apply at once with perfect confidence?

'Dettol' is such an antiseptic—dangerous only to germs. It is a clean, pleasant fluid—non-poisonous and non-staining—highly efficient as a germ-killer. You can apply it freely (there are directions on every bottle). Remember, the smallest break in the skin is a wide-open gateway for the germs of septic infection. Disinfect cuts and scratches at once with 'Dettol.' The way to prevent blood-poisoning is to kill the germs that cause it.

TOWARD NANKOW

Japanese for many months.—United Press.

Two Planes Fall

Nanking, Aug. 25. Nine Japanese bombers flew over Nanking twice last night, above the clouds, and dropped approximately 24 bombs on the military aerodrome. The damage is not yet determined.

Chinese pursuit planes engaged in a running fight with the raiders in which at least one Japanese was shot down in flames.

Later it was learned that the Chinese aircraft dispersed the bombers, and shot down two of them near Chuyung. The damage at Nanking is now shown to be slight.

It is learned that 11 Japanese planes bombed Tientsin yesterday, dropping 30 or 40 bombs and killing 20.

Dogged Resistance

Reports from Chinese field headquarters state Japanese artillery heavily bombarded Liangwangchuan and the Tientsin-Pukow railway front yesterday, but that detachments attacking the Chinese at Nanking and Pootung on the Peiping-Hankow railway were forced to retreat to Lutian.

The 1,000 Japanese attacking Pingdingshan were repulsed after a hard artillery duel in which two companies of Chinese were annihilated.

The Chinese counter-attacked at Nanking, forcing the Japanese to abandon machine-guns and equipment.—United Press.

Battle Near Tientsin

Tientsin, Aug. 25. The Japanese military headquarters here announces a severe engagement at Chinghai, south of Tientsin. The Japanese troops opened an attack on the Chinese positions along the Tientsin-Pukow railway after an arduous march along rain-soaked roads.—Reuter.

Chinese Prepared

According to reports received in Hongkong to-day, the Chinese have assembled a fighting force of 25,000 men at Tientsin, anticipating an attempted landing by the Japanese.

To Kick Japanese Out

Tientsin, Aug. 25. The Chinese 20th Army is bearing the full brunt of the Japanese offensive which started at 6 a.m. on August 20 with very heavy artillery fire and resulted in the bombardment and capture of Chinghai on Monday. Later, Chinese reinforcements counter-attacked and drove back the Japanese to their original positions, recapturing Chinghai while Chinese plain clothes men harassed the Japanese flanks.

The Chinese claim there were over a thousand Japanese casualties, whilst the Chinese casualties totalled several hundred.

The small, wiry former Chief of the Peace Preservation Corps at present commanding the 30th Division of the 20th Army, sitting in his underwear underneath an umbrella in pouring rain, said to the United Press correspondent: "The Japanese have kicked the 20th Army around for three years; now we will kick the Japanese out of Tientsin and Peiping." He added that he expected General Sung Cheli-yuan soon to arrive to take command of all the Chinese armies on the Tientsin-Pukow front.—United Press.

Sweeping South

Peiping, Aug. 25. (6.40 a.m.). According to Japanese sources here Kalgan has fallen. The Japanese claim to have entered the capital city of Chahar and to have swept past it in a south-easterly direction along the Peiping-Suiyang railway line, towards Nankow Pass, where 50,000 Chinese troops have been bitterly contesting the Japanese attack form the south.

If the report of Kalgan's fall is true, the Chinese forces in Nankow Pass will be trapped between two powerful Japanese armies.—Reuter.

Major Action Near

Tokyo, Aug. 25. According to the well-informed Domei News Agency there are 400,000 Chinese troops in North China at present and a major action is expected at any moment.

The Agency adds that the Japanese have occupied sections of the Great Wall and the Japanese flag floats from several of the ancient watch-towers.—United Press.

Raider Shot Down

Nanking, Aug. 25. (4.02 a.m.). It is officially announced that nine Japanese bombers carried out a night raid over the capital and dropped 15 bombs outside the Kwangshamen. One raiding Japanese plane was shot down south of Chuyung, 15 miles from Nanking, by Chinese pursuit planes.—Reuter.

Correspondent's Experience

Shanghai, Aug. 25. Mr. MacGregor, United Press correspondent, writing from outside Nanking on Monday reports: "I watched batteries of three-inch Japanese guns vainly shelling Chinese machine-gun nests on the mountain-side flanking the mouth of the Nankow Pass after I had cycled from Peiping in a torrential downpour, it ing the Chinese batteries. These immediately ceased fire.

Earlier, a Chinese plane flew over North Hongkew and drew a light fire from anti-aircraft batteries. It dropped no bombs, however, and flew in the direction of Woosung, where the Chinese are believed to be raiding the Japanese who are still attempting to land additional troops. Meanwhile, the Pootung bombardment went on intermittently.

Despite the reports of scattered fighting and bombing, it is not believed the real Japanese "push" has begun. It is imminent, however, and scheduled to commence as soon as the landing parties are prepared to attack.

Chinese officials to-day revealed that 27 White Russians, formerly employed by North China warlords, including Chang Tso-lin, are at present with the Chinese Army in the Shanghai area.—United Press.

Woosung Battle Details

Shanghai, Aug. 25. A graphic story makes the fighting at Lion Forest Front on Monday and the complete annihilation of a Japanese brigade which succeeded in landing in the Woosung vicinity was relayed by Chinese quarters here to-day.

Following the landing of the brigade along Paoshan and Chuan-shan, north of Woosung Fort, at 4 a.m. Friday, the Japanese pushed on towards Lotienchen. At the same time around 50 marines suddenly appeared near Lion Forest Fort further north and converged on the same town.

The small detachment of Chinese troops, guarding the town put up a stubborn fight but being outnumbered, were forced to retreat. The Japanese occupied Shengchiachen and Yehpuchen and began immediately to erect defences around the villages.

At 2 o'clock in the afternoon, Chinese reinforcements from the rear were rushed to Lotienchen by two routes, over Chiabo Road and Yutai Road. Finding themselves surrounded, the Japanese set fire to the two villages and made a frantic dash through the Chinese lines. They retreated to Chuan-shan and fired at the Chinese from across the creek.

Taken By Surprise

Meanwhile, the Chinese sent a flying column and attacked the Japanese right flank which finally brought about the collapse of the Japanese resistance at 4 o'clock.

Great confusion reigned in the ranks of the Japanese when Chinese troops took them by surprise on the side. The whole body of Japanese was wiped out.

After clearing up the remnants in the sector, the Chinese advanced to Shengchiachen and engaged another Japanese landing party. Following a brief encounter, the marines withdrew to their ships.—Central News.

Being Surrounded

Nanking, Aug. 25 (5 a.m.). A detachment of 500 Japanese which succeeded in landing at Woosung on Monday night, is still ashore in the vicinity of Shiao-shan, south of Woosung Creek, according to military information received here. The Chinese reinforcements at Lion Forest Fort are reported to be surrounding this Japanese unit.

It is also reported that a Japanese major and a brigade commander were killed during the landing on Monday night. The major was an officer of the Air Force.—Central News.

To Kiss Your Hand, Madam

Hand-kissing will soon again be the formal way of greeting women. Women are not satisfied with handshakes, says Hollywood's Max Factor.

They want something more intimate. Here are some comments by women stars:

Margaret Dietrich: Very charming—if done by one who knows how.

Una Merkel: I always get rightly when my hand is kissed.

Irene Dunne: Must be learned at an early age or it is likely to be clumsy.

Patsy Kelly: Always afraid I'm going to be bitten.

being impossible to secure a motor-car.

"I was treated courteously until I approached a Japanese Lieutenant, whose identity is evidently an important military secret, when members of the Staff bombarded me with questions. Finally blinding me, they led me over a floundering, muddy and rocky road with a cavalry escort to Nankow, where they handed me over to the Japanese."

"They held me for another hour, questioned me, searched my wallet and requested me to sign a statement that I was not held by Japanese. However, I refused.

"At twilight, I rushed away and carried my bicycle through a sea of clay to Chungking, to the accompaniment of frequent rifle shots from maize fields nearby, where plain clothes men were engaging Japanese patrols. Later, I proceeded towards Peiping along the Peiping-Suiyang Railway tracks. South of Shiao-shan rifle bullets suddenly whistled past and I halted, after which I saw a straw hat and a rifle approaching. Then an amiable young Chinese came up sheepishly grinning, remarking: 'Sorry, I thought you were a Japanese.'"—United Press.

FOREIGNERS READY TO FIGHT

ing with a hail of fire from the ground. The Chinese are apparently prepared for the engagement at Chenju, upon which retention of the main line of defence depends.

With fighting raging across the Pootung delta, the forces in the immediate vicinity of Shanghai are quiet, although residents on the outskirts of the city can distinctly hear the gunfire and feel the buildings rock from the tons of explosives which are being rained upon Chenju, miles away.

FIRE ON AMERICAN FLAG

A Japanese spokesman to-day admitted Japanese troops had fired on the American flag, but only after Chinese troops quartered in the Wing On Cotton Mill, Woosung, had opened fire on the Japanese.

"The Chinese forces are using various kinds of foreign flags, including the United States Red Swastika and the Red Cross emblem," the spokesman said. "As long as this is done action should be taken by the respective consuls to see that their flags are not abused."

The Japanese forces bombed and shelled the firing from the Woosung mills.

LANDING IN POOTUNG

At least 1,200 Japanese have landed at Nankow, on the Pootung side of the Whangpoo, and the most severe fighting is raging there. There have been heavy casualties on both sides.

The Chinese admit the Japanese have effected a landing in the vicinity of Kanchiao, on the Pootung side, thereby precipitating ground hostilities in an area hitherto only touched by aerial and naval bombardments.

Enormous new fires have started in Pootung.

SEVERE CASUALTIES

A Japanese military spokesman announced to-day that Chinese troops in Pootung which have been shelling Hongkew for the past three days, killed 50 and wounded 200, mostly Japanese civilians.

"Unless this shelling ceases," he said, "the Japanese Army will take the offensive in Pootung and drive the Chinese across the river into Nankow, which will then become a Chinese base, necessitating a large-scale Japanese bombardment which we are reluctant to undertake on account of the large civilian population."

The spokesman estimated the Chinese casualties during the Japanese landing operations at 2,000 dead, 4,000 wounded. He said "He did not believe a Japanese declaration of war was pending but the Japanese offensive on the Yangtze delta was definitely under way."

He added the Chinese 88th Division had been badly shattered and was now relieved by another unit.—United Press.

"We Will Keep Fighting"

Shanghai, Aug. 25. (12.02 a.m.). "We will keep fighting until we have smashed the Japanese," declared a youthful Lieutenant, Woo Chuang, when questioned by Reuter's correspondent in the Chinese lines opposite the International Settlement positions near the North Station, held by the Welsh Fusiliers. He seemed confident of eventual victory.

Rations were plentiful, he said, and health and morale of the troops were excellent. The men were armed with German type rifles, manufactured in China, and they wear German-made steel helmets.

Lieutenant Woo Chuang said there had been some looting but added that it had ceased following several summary executions.

The interview ended when Japanese naval batteries shells landed uncomfortably close.

Welshmen At Home

Returning to the British defence lines, Reuter's correspondent visited the Welsh Fusiliers, and was constantly asked "What's the latest news from home?"

The men were quite at home, sitting, shirtless in the sunshine, behind their sandbag barricades and redoubts, cleaning their rifles and washing their faces, reading, smoking, chatting one another when off duty, but ready for any emergency. On their sandbags were chalked signs as is the way with British troops wherever they are on active service, reading: "No Credit," "Biddy's Tavern," "Alf and Alf," "suspense," and other such reminders of easier, if not happier, times.

Troops manning one of the redoubts had adopted a small, black dog. They found it wandering homeless. "It is a one-man-dog," a Fusilier explained. "At first it wouldn't eat and I had the devil's own time with it making friends. But now it thinks I'm a bloomin' O.C."—Reuter.

Scoff At Casualty Report

Shanghai, Aug. 25. (6.53 a.m.). The officially announced Japanese estimate of 100 soldiers killed during Monday's landing operations at Woosung is ridiculed by the Chinese, who claim that terrific loss of life among the Japanese was caused by the explosion of land mines.

The mines were set off under the feet of the marching men as they moved towards their objectives, the Chinese declare. The Chinese place the Japanese casualties at at least 6,000.

Meanwhile, in Shanghai itself naval and military experts continue their attempts to ascertain the source of the missile which wrecked the big departmental stores on Nanking Road with such terrible loss of life and property. The police are rapidly clearing the littered streets for resumption of traffic.

The costly nature of the damage can be gauged from the fact that the the Shanghai and Woosung areas will not be long in driving the Chinese out of Shanghai, and with the ensuing displacement of the war area the need for a neutral zone will disappear.

Although France from the first has favoured the British proposals, it is understood the United States replied to the suggestion of His Majesty's Government that the effectiveness of the scheme depended entirely upon Japan's consent which did not appear to be forthcoming.

The Chinese decision, presumably will have no more practical effect than to throw the onus of refusal on Japan.—Reuter.

U.S. Not Informed

Washington, Aug. 24. Mr. Cordell Hull, Secretary of State, to-day told a Press conference that the Chinese Ambassador to Washington had not signified his Government's willingness to agree to the British proposal for a neutrality zone around Shanghai, in return for a promise of protection of Japanese by international forces. Mr. Hull, however, spoke of the British scheme as one entailing a truce. He said China had not announced acceptance with the provision that Japan does likewise.

Asked whether the United States Government would force the evacuation of its remaining citizens in Shanghai if warring troops invaded the International Settlement, Mr. Hull replied he had not received formal suggestions from officials in Shanghai.

Relief Funds

The Secretary of State indicated that a substantial portion of the $500,000 emergency appropriation allotted by Congress last week would be allocated for relief and refugee work.—Reuter.

"THE ARCADIAN"

Arrangements in connection with the Hongkong Philharmonic Society's forthcoming production, "The Arcadians," have progressed a further stage, the Queen's Theatre having been reserved for four public performances to take place on December 15, 16, 17 and 18. As already announced, rehearsals are due to commence on Monday evening.

plate glass destroyed in the Wing On store alone is worth over $100,000. The damage to Sincere's is at present beyond estimate. The Sun Sun Company also suffered severely.—Reuter.

Town Nearly Wiped Out

Shanghai, Aug. 25.

Lotienchen, a small town in the Paoshan district near Woosung, has been nearly wiped out by fire as a result of incendiary bombs dropped by Japanese planes on the night of August 23 during the attempted landing of Japanese reinforcements in that vicinity, it was disclosed to-day.

The Japanese bombers attacked the town in an attempt to drive the Chinese entrenched there out of their positions.

Seven members of the local fire brigade, who attempted to put out the flames were seriously injured.

Japanese planes flew over Kiangling yesterday and dropped bombs, but no damage was done.—Central News.

BRITISH MOTOR

FIGURES

London, Aug. 24. The total output of the British motor industry for the nine months ending June 30 was 308,034 private cars and taxis and 91,123 commercial vehicles, representing an 11 per cent. increase in output on the corresponding period to June, 1936, which was itself a record.

These figures reflect not only highly prosperous conditions for the motor industry itself but for the country generally.—British Wireless.

AMERICA AND THE FAR EAST CRISIS

The appeal by Mr. Cordell Hull, United States Secretary of State, to China and Japan to "refrain from resorting to war" in the settlement of their differences, is couched in cautious diplomatic language. Actually, of course, a state of undeclared war now exists between the two nations, with Japan the instigator thereof. Mr. Hull concedes that the present situation in the Far East is the concern of all nations, since it is the outcome of failure to recognise principles of international law which have been accepted by most of the countries of the world. Attention is drawn in particular to the provisions of the Kellogg Pact and the Nine-Power Treaty, of which both China and Japan are signatories. Judgment is not passed on the merits of the quarrel, although, reading between the lines, the appeal is obviously directed more to Japan than to China. The Kellogg Pact rules out war as an instrument of national policy, whilst the Nine-Power Treaty guarantees the integrity of China. No-one can say that China, in resisting Japanese aggression, is guilty of breach of the Kellogg Pact, whilst China wants nothing better than respect for the provisions of the Nine-Power Treaty. It is precisely because that latter treaty is being violated by Japan that China is compelled to defend her independence. Mr. Hull made reference, in his appeal, to the statement which he made in July outlining the principles on which the United States' foreign policy is based. In that utterance, which was obviously made with the Far Eastern situation in view, Mr. Hull said he favoured peaceful negotiation of disputes and faithful observance of international obligations, coupled with respect by all nations for the rights of others. At the time, this declaration was interpreted as a warning to Japan in her dealings with China. The latest reiteration of that policy shows that the American attitude remains unchanged. Japan is, without question, impinging on the rights

TEN YEARS' TALE OF WORKPEOPLE KILLED IN FACTORIES AND WORKSHOPS IN BRITAIN.
The men and fractions of men represent millions and fractions of millions employed; each coffin represents a hundred deaths; each ambulance ten thousand injured. NOTE HOW, IN SPITE OF ALL SAFETY - FIRST PROPAGANDA, THE COFFINS AND AMBULANCES MULTIPLY WHEN EMPLOYMENT GOES UP

THE jobs that are killing off British workpeople in the greatest numbers are those in mines, factories, ships and railways.

This is not to say that these are the four most dangerous kinds of work in the country: only that, because so many people get a living from them, they are returning the highest totals of industrial deaths.

In the ten years between the end of 1925 and the end of 1935 these four jobs killed 24,877 workpeople. Fewer than 1,000 were killed in all other industrial occupations.

Every three hours, night and day, during the ten years that ended at the beginning of last year, a man, woman, youth or girl was killed at work.

The total number of workpeople killed in this 10-year cycle is greater than the entire population of Canterbury, or Deal; greater than the combined population of Durham and Ely.

A death-roll like this is bad enough in itself. What makes it infinitely more sickening is that a great proportion of these working people need not have died—would not have died if they, or those responsible for their safety, had had the sense to take precautions they knew they ought to take.

This proportion of the 25,800 workpeople killed at their jobs between 1925 and 1935 died because human life is held too cheaply; because this civilised age is not civilised enough yet to understand that the least human life is worth more than the greatest machine.

Not widely quoted in recent newspapers was a passage in the Factories and Workshop inspectors' report setting forth the earliest known record of an industrial accident to a young person (it happened in 1540):

"A yonge childe . . . standinge nere to the whele of a horse myll . . . was by some myshap come within the swepe or compass of the cogge whele and therewith was torn in pieces and killed. And, upon inquisition taken, it was founde that the whele was the cause of the childe's death, whereupon the myll was forthwith defaced and pulled downe."

The Chief Inspector's comment was: "This remedy might now be regarded as too radical and uneconomic, but it suggests the alternative to educating the employer."

of China, and it is this circumstance which has caused her to forfeit the sympathy of the whole world. With the facts as they are, however, the time has arrived for something more definite and pointed by foreign spokesmen than a uniform appeal to both sides. Japan is the guilty party, not China, and she should be plainly warned that this is the view which other nations take of her actions.

It suggests, more accurately, creased prosperity" is the way what might be the alternative. the Chief Inspector of Factories puts it. But it is not: not yet.

By the end of the Middle Ages the people in Britain knew enough to place the life of a child on a higher plane than economics. That horse-mill must have been at least as important to the sixteenth-century community as an average modern factory is to the present community.

They closed it down, and thereby doubtless "educated" every other employer in the locality into the perception that if he wanted to go on earning profits he had better not let his machinery kill a child.

We, enlightened descendants of the horse-mill age, prefer to pursue a less radical but more economic course. We have admirable institutions for teaching safety-first in mines, factories, ships and railways.

We print pamphlets and deliver lectures, and unleash what is called propaganda in favour of the preservation of human life. We get the figures for deaths in industry to come down a little each year—

Until the country suddenly becomes more prosperous (that is, until there are only about 1,250,000 insured people who want work and cannot get it). The death rate in industry, then, as appears from the latest factories report, begins to go sharply up again.

"A rising tide of death and injury must still be regarded as the penalty to be paid for in-

LIFE IS CHEAP

By Robert Waithman

And mines inspectors this: "More than half of the accidents could have been avoided if had ordinary care and precaution been exercised by everyone concerned."

"Many of these falls of ground would not have occurred if proper attention were paid to the simple requirements of the Explosives in Coal Mines Order."

"Accident after accident occurs which by the exercise of a little thought or better supervision by the management could have been avoided."

And what everybody says is: The remedy is in the "education" of employers and employees.

With this blinding glimpse of the obvious most of the authorities appear to be content. They do not often say how education can be made effective. And it is by now permissible to doubt whether propaganda posters and lectures can be, after all, what is meant by education. If education means anything it must mean that the interests concerned have to be taught a lesson.

It seems equally clear that the lesson to be taught is that employers who sacrifice lives in the interests of bigger profits must be recognised and classified as criminals, and that workmen who take dangerous risks they could avoid must be denounced as half-wits.

Living "on immoral earnings and attempted suicide are both indictable offences in this country. You may be pardoned if you wonder, at this stage of civilisation, why the parallel crimes of profit-earning at the risk of employees' safety and deliberate negligence which endangers life continue to be regarded as evils which it would be too radical or uneconomic to punish.

THE FORBIDDEN WALTZ

DR. SCHUSCHNIGG'S Austrian Government has just forbidden Vienna to waltz, polka or one-step to the tunes of military marches. It is disrespectful to the marches, they say, and an insult to their fine associations.

Dancers never were over-concerned with the solemn associations of their dance tunes.

The steps from which—all our sixteenth century France to the notes of the Psalms of David.

A hundred years later Cromwell's armies, less put off than one might expect by their frivolous associations, marched into battle to them.

The big song of the American depression, "Brother, can you spare a dime?" meant to recall the most poignant slump associations, turned into a hot jazz number.

On the other hand, dance tunes often acquire a more solemn background than any march. A polka called "Dixie" was the marching song of the American Confederate armies. It never has been played since the Civil War without recalling the shattered glories of the old South.

dom from Spain. The Chileans made it their marching song then and have made it their National Anthem now.

A German children's round dance tune, "O Christmas tree, O Christmas tree, thy needles are so fair to see," has passed as the Red Flag into the anthem of the British Labour movement after a brief and splendid spell as the hymn of the rebel American State of Maryland.

A dance measure written two hundred years ago by Mozart in his Marriage of Figaro is now the slow march of the Brigade of Guards.

All the best songs of the last war came to the trenches off the dance floor.

"Tipperary," "Pack up your troubles" and the American "Over there" began frivolously as fox-trots. Now they rouse associations as solemn and moving as any march that ever came out of Austria.

Even "Rule Britannia" began, like "Keep the home fires burning," in pantomime.

Frivolous and solemn, tragic and convivial associations are not easily parted from each other. Is "The girl I left behind me" to be remembered as the tune to which the men marched to Waterloo on the morning of June 18, 1815, or as the quadrille to which they danced at the Duchess of Richmond's ball on the night of June 17?

More tears were choked back in Flanders Fields when the mouth-organ played "Broken Doll" than when the drums and fifes struck up the "British Grenadiers."

"I wish to die to the notes of a Saraband," said the 80-year-old French gallant, des Yvelaux. It would take an intolerable prig to ask to die to the notes of the Marseillaise.

Dr. Schuschnigg need only compare the story of two tunes composed in his native Vienna. The Radetzky March was composed by Johann Strauss the elder to celebrate a victory over the Italians in 1849.

But Vienna has long forgotten that it was this tune's popularity as a one-step that just led up to the general ban on march music in the ball-room.

The Blue Danube Waltz was written by Johann Strauss the younger. It was written for no particular occasion. But there are few people in any part of the world in whom it does not arouse a treasured memory.

There are still fewer who would recognise the Radetzky March if they heard it.

SEQUEL TO LOSS OF JUNK

INSURANCE POLICY CLAIM

Arising out of the sinking of a trading junk near Sor Chau Island, a claim for $9,000 on an insurance policy taken out in respect of cargoes shipped on her was brought before the Chief Justice, Sir Athol MacGregor, in the Supreme Court this morning.

Plaintiffs were the Hop Fat firm and they sued the Canton Insurance Office, Ltd. for the value of 750 bags of manure and 150 bags of cement.

The Hon. Mr. Leo D'Almada, Jnr., instructed by Mr. M. A. da Silva, appeared for plaintiffs, and the defendant company was represented by Mr. H. C. Macnamara, on the instructions of Mr. W. A. Mackinlay, of Deacons.

Mr. D'Almada said the claim was on an insurance policy taken out by his clients with the defendant company in respect of 150 bags of cement and 750 sacks of manure shipped on a junk which had foundered. The premium on the policy had in fact not been paid.

The plaintiff firm consisted of two partners, Ho Shiu-nam and Leung Chiu. He was more or less a sleeping partner until fairly recently, the management of the concern being left in the hands of Leung and one Lai Fung-kwan, who was the manager. Shortly after the sinking of the junk, Ho had certain trouble with these two men, with the result that they were not now available to give evidence.

Plaintiffs were merchants, and dealt fairly largely with the Lin Fat firm of Macao. Sometime towards the end of December, 1935, an order was received from them for the goods mentioned, and the terms of payment agreed upon were $5,000 on account and the balance to be paid on delivery. On January 3, the cargo was put on board the junk, which was towed by launch out of Hongkong at 5 p.m. that day. On arrival at Capatsumin Pass, the vessels, which were then alongside one another, separated, the junk following about 100 feet behind and being towed by a rope from the launch, which was going from three to four knots.

JUNK FOUNDERS

Continuing, Counsel said that all went well with the voyage until a point somewhere near the Sor Chau Island was reached, when rough weather was encountered. The weather was so rough that both vessels shipped water. The corking at the bottom of the junk was dislodged by the severe pitching and rolling and, unable to cope with the rush of water, her master signalled to the coxswain of the launch to turn, the object being to seek shelter in an inlet a little to the east of Sor Chau Island and to beach her, if necessary. This plan, however, did not succeed and the junk foundered some two miles to the south of the Island.

The defence had put in a plea that the junk was scuttled and in this connection, it was interesting to note that the master had on board the junk his wife and 9-year old son, besides a crew of eight. Further, the master himself had suffered personal loss, and the junk was not insured.

An alternative plea that the junk was not seaworthy had also been put in by the defence. The case for the plaintiffs was that the junk was seaworthy and that her sinking was due to one of the perils of the sea. She was ten years old and was bought in 1933 by the master for $7,000.

On the same day the junk was foundered, the master returned to Hongkong and a claim was laid with the defendant company. Three days later, the defendant company sent out a diver, who spent some two hours in locating the wreck.

Counsel then went on to say that it seemed fair to assume that nothing suspicious was found because, if there had been any, an earlier attempt to salvage the junk would have been made. As it was, the junk was not salvaged until 40 days after she had foundered, when she was brought to the Kwong Fat Long shipyard. On March 11, the junk was sold for $80 to the owner of the yard, who subsequently re-sold it piecemeal for $700.

Inside the junk were found the bags of cement and several hundreds of empty sacks, which were seven. Counsel pointed out that the manure, which was in crystal form, could easily have been dissolved by water.

BOOKS SEIZED

Ho Shiu-nam then gave corroborative evidence, and stated the trouble he had with his co-partner was over certain accounts, which the latter had failed to explain. Leung subsequently disappeared with the books. Cross-examined by Mr. Macnamara, Ho said he was surprised when he heard from his solicitor that the books had been seized by the police. He considered Leung as a dishonest man and agreed that the books did not show the entry of $5,000 received from the Lin Fat firm on account in respect of the cargo.

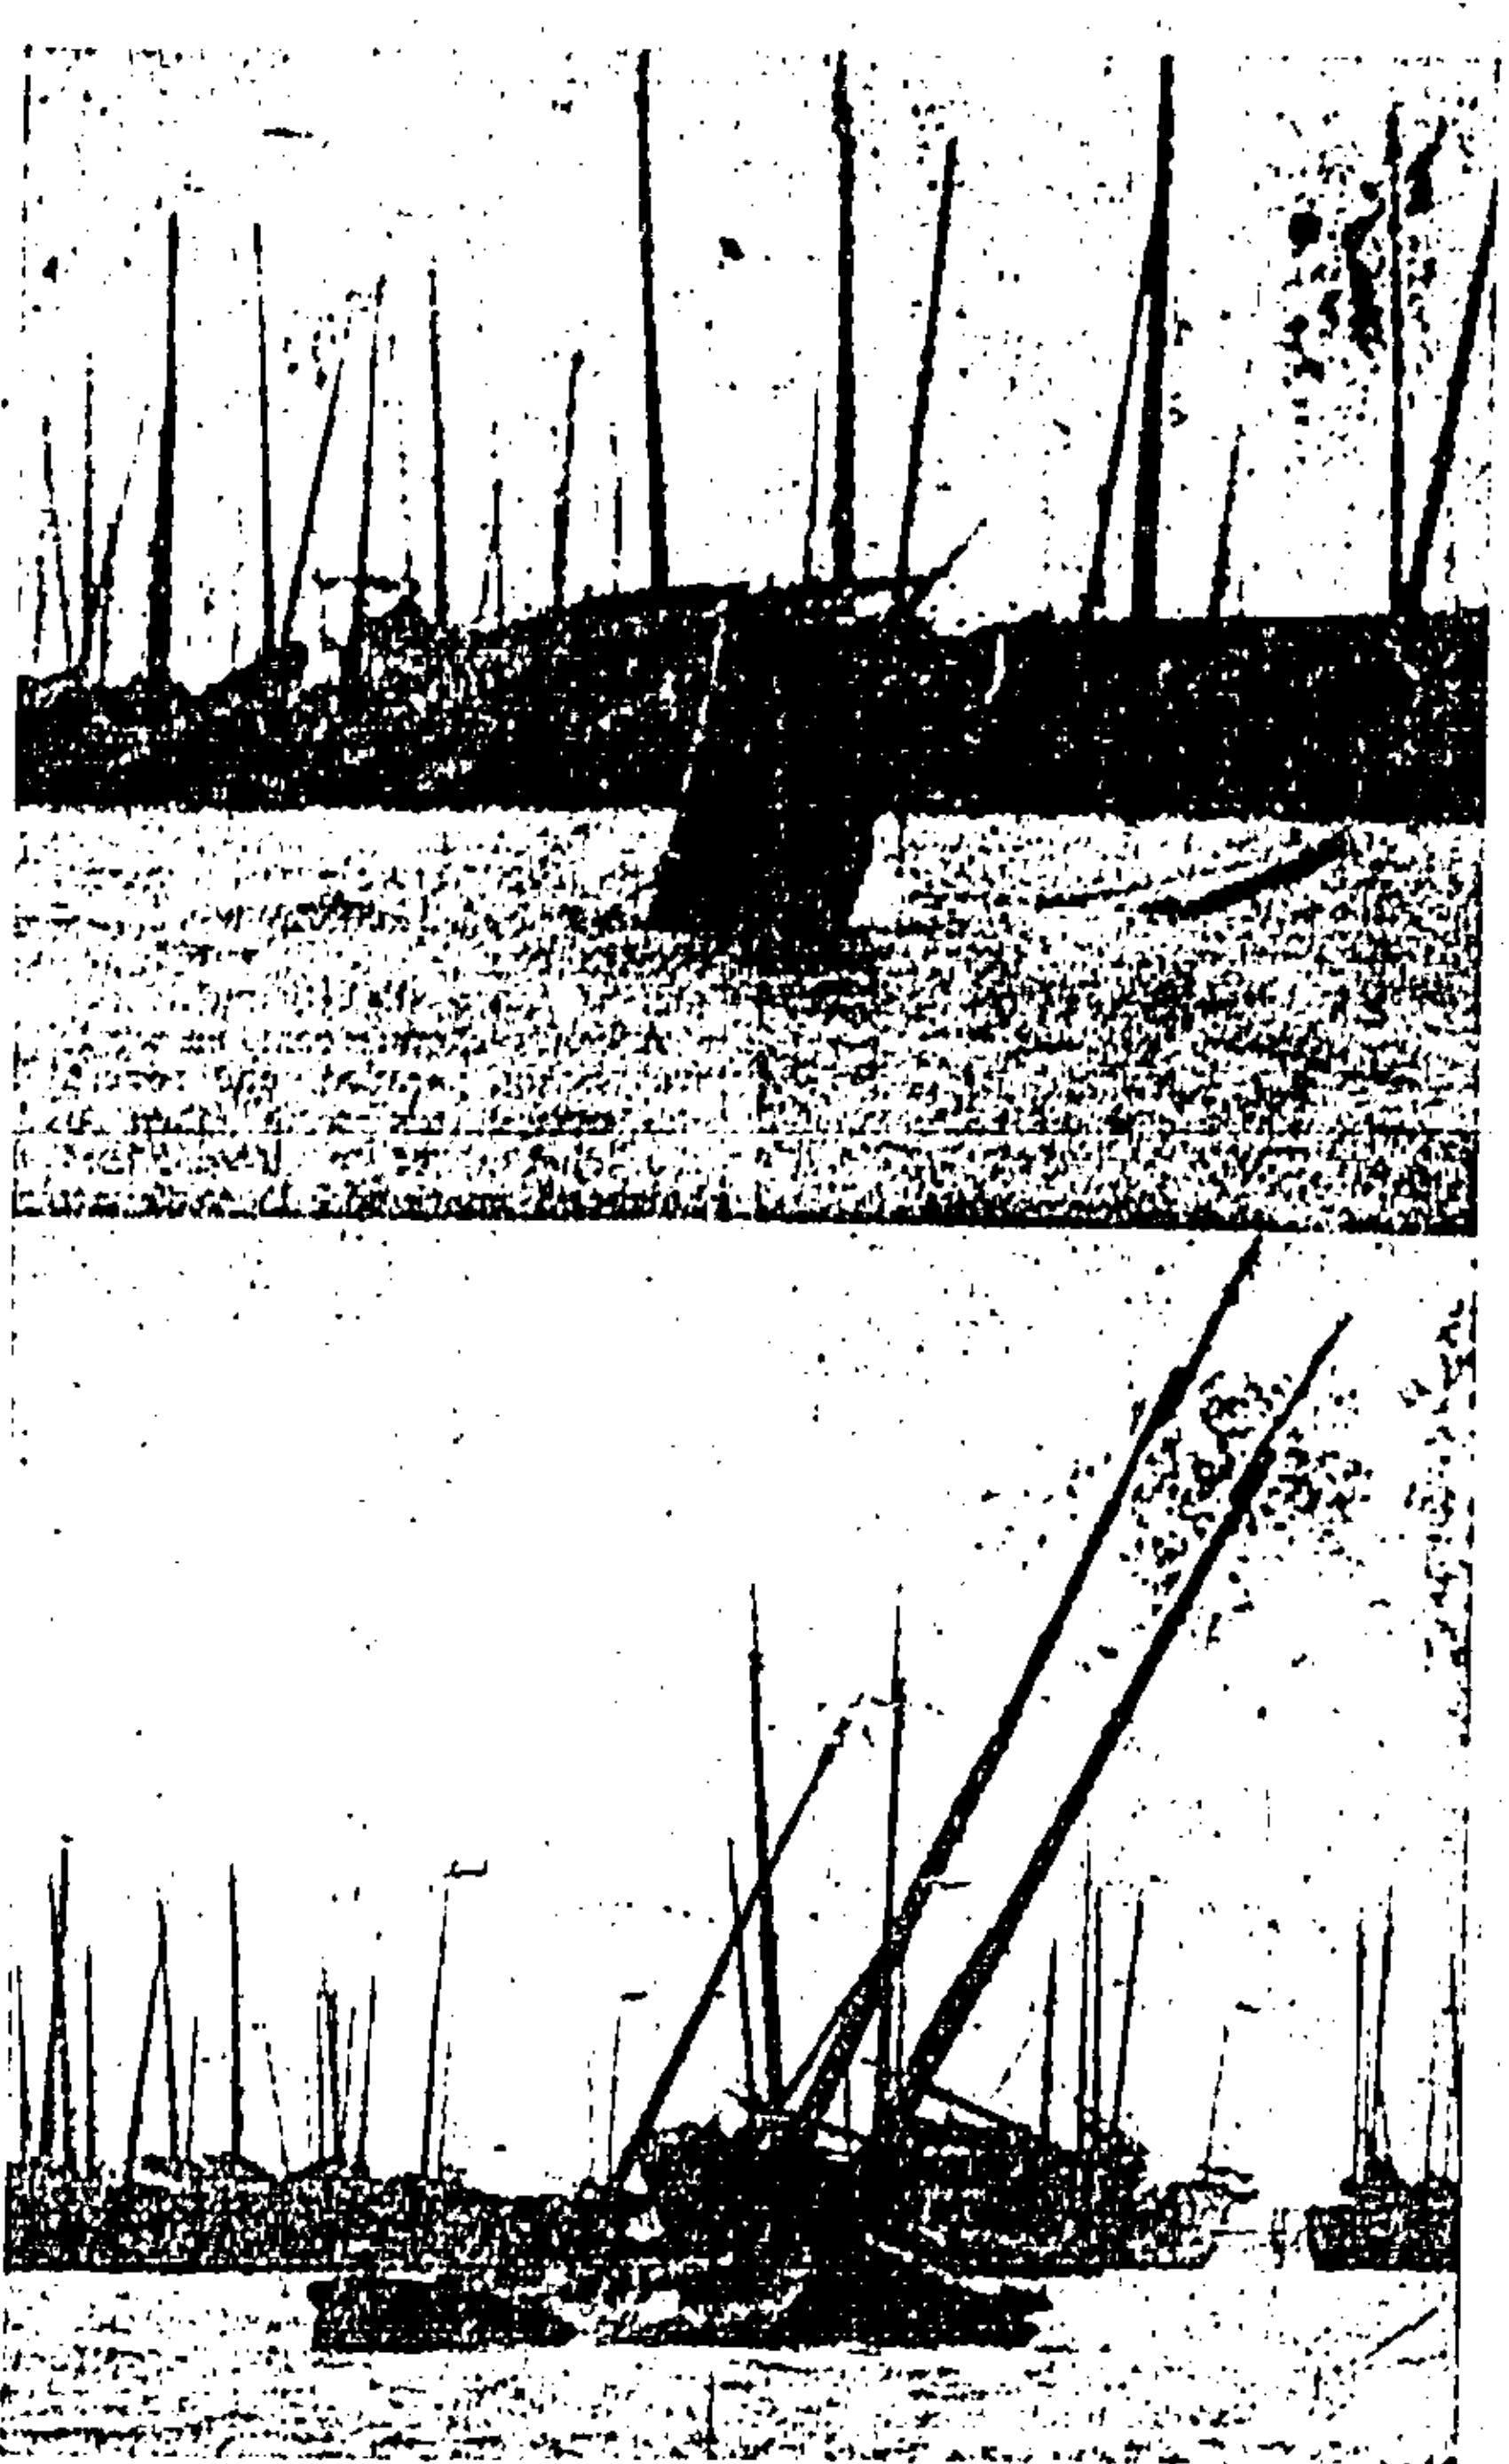

Counsel asked of a previous insurance policy taken out in respect of 120 tons of coal, and Ho said the matter was looked after by Leung. He did not know that the policy was a dummy one to cover the policy on the cargo shipped on the junk which foundered. He would not be surprised if Leung did not actually ship the cargo of coal.

The case is proceeding.

Italian Air Victories

French Concerned Over Position

Paris, Aug. 24. The Italian victories in the international air race threaten to upset the forty-hour week in French aviation plants.

Le Temps has demanded "an objective inquiry into the state of our aviation." It draws attention to the point that the Government is solely responsible, due to the nationalisation programme.

The Navy official, M. Cesar Campinchi, in a speech at St. Nazaire, drew attention to the fact that Italian plane manufacturers were aided by a sixty-nine-hour week, whereas French production has been slowed down, leading to the belief that the Cabinet will make an effort to secure an agreement with the trade unions for rendering possible a longer week in aviation plants.

The press generally states that the French air position has been "badly compromised" as a result of the outcome of the air race.—United Press.

CHILD DUMPING

A case of child-dumping came before Mr. W. Schofield at the Central Magistracy this morning when Yeung Mai, 22, married woman, of Macao, residing at Main Street, Apleichau, appeared to answer a charge of leaving an eight-months' old child in Island Road near a rubbish dump, endangering its life.

Sub-Inspector J. Dredge asked for seven days' remand in police custody. The child was in hospital in a critical condition and there was a possibility of a much more serious case.

The application was granted.

CHINA DID NOT WANT WAR

CHIANG A MAN OF PEACE

H.E. Signor de Stefani, High Counsellor of the Chinese Government, made a statement to the Press this morning on the Shanghai war.

Signor de Stefani is returning to Italy after finishing the task entrusted to him by Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek to re-organise the finances of the country.

He said: "China is prepared for war notwithstanding that she is not keen on war. Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek is a loyal friend of peace. Independent of the outcome of this war, which it is impossible to foresee the length—it will serve to enforce the consciousness of unity in the spiritual and political condition of China and to force into being the administrative structure of a modern State."

"I have dedicated the time prescribed by my agreement to solving the practical problem of Central and Provincial administrative structure. This is a great extraordinary work that can be realised only by extraordinary vigour, power and order."

"The political and administrative progress of China under the able guidance of the Generalissimo, is continually accelerating. The natural resources of China are imposing and, therefore, she also has economical possibilities. The ordinary receipts of the Budget can be rapidly increased by three times. China has always honoured her engagements towards foreign creditors."

"Many of the officials appointed with special care by the Generalissimo himself to work with him both in civil and military administration might hold their position in any country of the world. The unfulfilled future of China as a civil and military international power will represent a new factor in the political equilibrium of the world. I am happy to have worked with the Generalissimo in this exceptional period of Chinese history."

H.E. de Stefani, who is one of the most constructive advisers in finance and administration is leaving China, with the Generalissimo's cordial felicitations by the Conte Verde on September 11.

COUNCIL ORDER IGNORED RESTAURANT LICENSEE FINED

Mr. M. J. Abbott, Assistant Crown Solicitor, appeared at the Central Magistracy this morning when the hearing of the summons against Hon Cheuk-kau, licensee of No. 66 and the second floor of No. 67 Main Street, Aberdeen, for carrying on a restaurant without a licence from the Urban Council, was resumed.

The case had first come up about a fortnight ago, when Mr. D. McCallum, defending, had applied for an adjournment pending an appeal to the Governor-in-Council to allow completion of the requirements of a new policy of the Urban Council.

This morning Mr. Abbott asked that a substantial penalty be imposed, to be suspended till the result of the petition was known. He also stated that he understood the premises were still being used as a eating-house despite the fact that the conditions had not been complied with, and he asked for an order that defendant should stop using them as such.

Mr. McCallum said the restaurant had carried on business for 18 years in the same premises under the same name. In June, 1937, he was ordered to comply with the new policy of the Urban Council. It was required of them, in pursuance of the Council's new policy to combat the not quite satisfactory condition then existing in Chinese restaurants, to effect certain modifications. In his client's case these modifications included structural alterations which would involve him in an expense of three to four thousand dollars.

When he discovered how long it would take to get the plans of the alterations, he applied to the Urban Council for a temporary licence. He opened up again and did this as he was facing an accumulated loss which he estimated at some $11,000 per annum, this including rent, breaches of contract, etc. He therefore asked that if a decision be made against his client it should be in the shape of a nominal fine, enforcement to be suspended pending the result of the petition to the Governor-in-Council.

His Worship made an order for business to cease after four days, that is, defendant will be allowed to carry on till the evening of Sunday, August 29. He also imposed a fine of $75, enforcement to be suspended.

CARELESS BUT NOT DANGEROUS

KOWLOON CAR DEALER'S DRIVING

Wallace Harper, of Messrs. Wallace Harper and Co., Ltd., Nathan Road, was convicted of careless driving when he appeared on remand before Mr. K. M. A. Barnett at the Kowloon Magistracy this morning on charge of dangerous driving in Prince Edward Road on August 1.

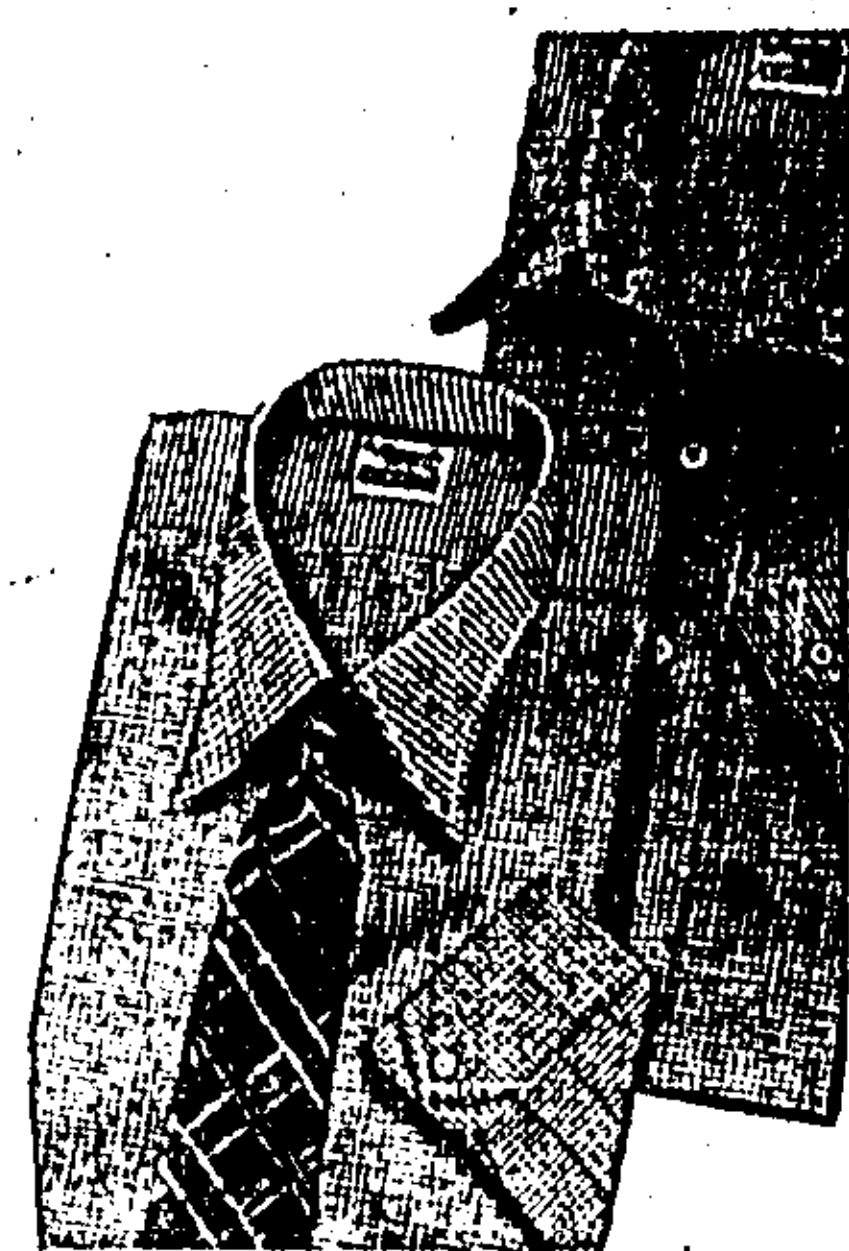

In delivering judgment, His Worship said it was to be decided whether driving in that manner was dangerous in view of the fact that there was no traffic. It was not dangerous driving within the meaning of the Section. In His Worship's opinion the driving could be termed careless driving. He reminded defendant that the King's highway was not the place for recreation. There was little to distinguish between defendant's case and that of a boy riding in circles on a bicycle. The proper place for the case would have been the Juvenile Court and had it appeared there, the defendant would have been sent home to be spanked by his parents. His Worship did not want to spoil defendant's good driving record but he thought that defendant relied too much upon that good record.

Defendant was convicted of careless driving, but no fine was imposed.

The Baby In Summer-Time.

Many infants suffer health irregularities during the summer months and especially in this so with foreign babies in the East. Not only is the climate trying but left to the care of native servants, children may be allowed to eat food of a doubtful nature, or get over-heated at play with consequent chill.

When your child shows signs of being unwell a dose of Baby's Own Tablets, promptly given, will often be all that is needed to correct the trouble and restore happy well-being.

Baby's Own Tablets have a mild laxative action, they cleanse the stomach and bowels, aid digestion, dispel constipation, check vomiting and "wind", correct colic and diarrhoea, relieve colds, croup and feverishness, and expel worms.

At teething time they help to settle the stomach, ease the inflammation in the gums, and induce sound restful sleep. Safe and dependable being the prescription of a medical child specialist, their pleasant taste makes the tablets a favourite medicine with children. Obtainable at all chemists.

ALL-IMPORTANT FINAL STAGES START TO-DAY

The county cricket championship is still an excitingly open contest. Yesterday Middlesex regained the leadership when they beat Kent and Yorkshire could win only first innings points from Surrey. Both teams have two more matches to play. Yorkshire oppose Sussex at Enstbourne and Hampshire at Bourne-mouth; Middlesex have to meet Notts at Nottingham and Surrey at Lord's.

Although Yorkshire made Surrey follow-on they could not force an outright decision. This was due to Fishlock and Gregory who batted splendidly to score a century respectively in the second. Fishlock also enjoyed the distinction of hitting up two centuries in the same match.

Middlesex just scraped home against Kent, but the losers made a gallant attempt to score 430 in the fourth innings, failing only by 10 runs. F. G. H. Chalk has young amateur cricketers, and Leslie Amner contributed 97. However, W. V. Robins put in some effective bowling and his 5 for 49 eventually won the game for Middlesex.

A double century by Barnett for Gloucester was a feature of the latest programme of matches. Gloucester were Lancashire by 21 runs, Middleard coming along in the second innings to bowl most effectively and to send back the Lancastrians for 186.

The results an dreading performance, as called by Reuter were follows.

Once upon a time there was a club called Vagabonds and they played the Exiles at a game called cricket in London.

Now, the Exiles knew how to bowl, but the Vagabonds were not too good at batting, and some very funny things began to hap-

One of the best Vagabonds, for instance, was called an opening batsman. That was very strange, for he did not receive his first ball until the fall of the sixth wicket. Which wouldn't have been so bad had he not been out to that first ball.

However, the Vagabonds were brave and ten of them batted and when the innings was over they had scored 12 whole runs.

The real villain was J. L. Harding, who took five wickets for 4 runs. His accomplice, F. A. Bowen, could only take five for 7 runs. Oh, and the Exiles made 155. It happened last month.

School Tennis And The L.T.A.

The Sports Editor,
HONGKONG TELEGRAPH.

Sir.—Regarding the article "Veritas" in Monday's Telegraph about tennis, I have some useful suggestions to put forward.

He said that it was time the L.E.A. encouraged Hongkong school tennis players. I agree this is very necessary. So far there is no place in tennis for schoolboys (I am talking about the majority. Of course there are some schools which play this game with very good players).

vide their boys' with courts on which to practice and play tournaments to raise the standard). But what the major do is to play privately with one two of their schoolmasters under conditions which can never improve their game. They cannot interchange their knowledge of the game with other schools which may have better players, therefore they have no chance of meeting players better than themselves. So their standard of play remains unchanged.

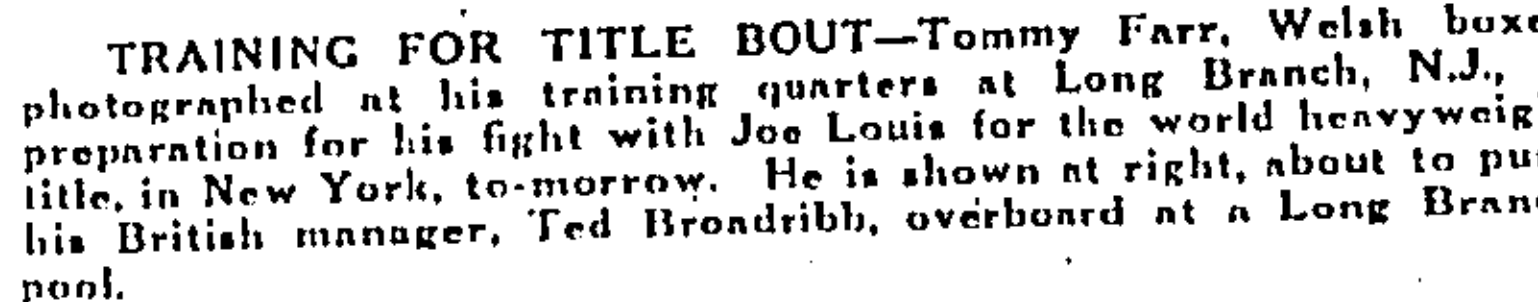

The only remedy is to stage either a schoolboys' league (like the Schoolboys' Football League) or tourneys. Who is going to do that? The only body is the L.T.A. They have their difficulties too, therefore co-operation with others is needed. The big difficulty is one courts. As most schools have 1 courts, I don't know whether 2

L.A. would stage a tournament 3 on such courts. If 4 courts are considered necessary, 5 only available for the schoolboys 6 those of Queen's College at Ca 7 way Bay. Then the question c 8 up whether Government will p 9
these courts to be used for su 0 purpose. The courts are prim 1 for boys studying in 2 schools, and as the participants 3 tournament or league would in 4 other than Government schools 5 the only thing to do is for the 6 to seek co-operation with the 7
Education Department, which is 8
dland to help in this direction. 9

The following schools have all introduced tennis into their activities and will almost assuredly support L.T.A. scheme to forward game.—King's College, Queen's College, C.B.S., St. Stephen's College, La Salle and D.P. All of the above schools have hard courts with the exception of Queen's, and the above mentioned schools could easily run a successful league.

The way, therefore, seems open for the L.T.A. to make an effort to popularise tennis in our schools.

I wonder how long it will be before football by artificial light becomes general in England as it is elsewhere. Anybody who has anything to do with the financial side of Soccer will tell you that the later the kick-off the greater the revenue.

Play matches at night and you rope in the shopkeepers and assistants who never get a chance to watch football from one season to another. Now that floodlighting systems have reached a stage of perfection, there is absolutely no reason why matches should start an hour or so earlier on the dark, mid-winter months.

Artificial light would be preferable to onlookers having to strain their eyes trying to make out ghostly figures prancing around in semi-darkness.

On the Continent it is not unusual for powerful lamps to be switched on when the light is fading towards the end of a game, while I have vivid recollections of the Olympic pole vault championships starting in brilliant sunshine and finishing in brilliant floodlight.

In fact, watching those athletes go up and over the 14ft. mark in a blaze of light while all around was in darkness was as grand a spectacle as one could have wished to see.

When the time comes for our Soccer leaders to realise that floodlit football is more than a stunt, I think you will find Arsenal leading the way. I understand it is just a question of an engineer pulling a switch lever.

"November . . . Arsenal v. Glasgow Rangers, at Highbury. Kick-off 8 p.m." Is it only a dream?

Big figures seem to be an Arsenal monopoly although at the time of writing the offer of £12,000 has failed to lure a certain young Welshman from Wolverhampton to Highbury.

Why must Arsenal always fly high? You may ask. One very good reason is that only the best will satisfy 50,000 patrons who have been given only the very best for a number of seasons.

To commence with there was even promise of a splendid season but the weather played havoc with the programme and the final result is rather disappointing. There were only three weeks to work off the three Open Cups, the Inter-legislatl, the Coronation Cup and innumerable high and low handicap competitions. It was intensive polo, and for too intense to be satisfactory. Unless the normal English polo season can be prolonged into August and early September, it is a pity, for the season is too short at its present pace, there can be much hope to get even with the Americans or the Argentines. It was one team—Addicks—through their ponies before the Champion Cup, and the other was hardly a team or a pony at the end of the season, not state.

A splendid offer from the Argentines to send a team out there had to be turned down, because we could not find six players good enough to go, who were willing to undertake the journey. Comment is surely unnecessary. I am afraid that fact is the only one of the season.

The whole subject of Rule 10, it is once more in the air. It is, understand, under active consideration at the moment. Rule 10 says "No player shall pay or receive payment for playing polo." Now many years past wealthy patrons of the game have mounted and contributed to the expenses of polo.

Oxford Most Successful

For the second year in succession Oxford had downed one of the main universities in inter-university sporting contests—Cambridge. The major event was those where full Blues are awarded to all or some of the competitors. In the head-to-head test just concluded the Oxford team were victorious in all events for rowing, cricket, hockey, tennis, and racquets. Cambridge won the contests for football, lawn tennis, athletics, and cross-country running. The concluding match was drawn.

Hutton went on to complete his first hundred in a Test match, and he did it exceedingly well. At the quarters a little over three and a quarter hours, he was never dull to watch until reaching the nineties, and then he had stood becalmed in the land of natural anxiety.

BRITISH ATHLETES' TRIUMPH

SUPERB RUNS OF ROBERTS AND WOODERSON

(By Fred Dartnell)

Paris, July 26.

Although Great Britain defeated France for the fifth time in succession in their athletic international by 66 points to 54 at Colombes yesterday, the French folk have taken their beating in excellent spirit.

Before the match our fellows were described as the best team in Europe. After it was all over the critics generously appraised the superiority of the "maillots."

We expected our fellows to win most of their points, as they did, on the track, but it was very gratifying to see French carry off the Long Jump with an effort of 23ft. 3½ins.

We also picked up 3 useful points in the High Jump. Here Newman, like Mantran did 6ft. 11in., but the Frenchman was awarded first place, according to rule, for his fewer number of failures.

Track events held pride of place, however, although the five pole vaulting of the Frenchmen Ramadier and Vintousky at our expense was much admired.

Best performances of the day were those of Roberts and Wooderson. The former beat Rampling's record in the 400 metres of 48sec. by half a second, and Wooderson upset Ladamie's previous best of 3min. 53.6sec. in the 1,500 metres, with 3 min. 53 sec. in the 1,500 metres, with 4min. 51sec.

It was glorious to see Roberts' lightning thrust to the tape with Wyllie 12 yards away and the French pair trailing desperately in the rear.

Then little Wooderson began to amaze the crowd with his devious pace. Roberts was majestic in his almost unchallenged superiority, but Wooderson did not have it all his own way. He was out for a world's record, and if he had been pushed more might have achieved one. I reckon that Wooderson's time for the 1,500 metres works out about 4min. 5sec. for the mile.

Normand, the French star, fought him gallantly in the last lap. Wooderson had done 50.8sec. for the 400 metres, 2min. 2sec. for 800 metres, and 3min. 4sec. for 1,200 and in the last lap Normand, as one of the French writers put it, made a "rapid" challenge to the Englishman.

But, to continue the train simile, Wooderson became a still faster express coming up the straight. He won by five seconds from Reg Thomas, who beat the Frenchman for second place.

The crowd cheered Wooderson to the echo and his first anxious question before he could regain his breath was about the time recorded.

"DOUBLE" FOR HOLMES
Six years ago Thomas finished second to the famous Ladamie in the same race. He did 3min. 55sec. then and his time yesterday was only 1.8sec. longer.

These veterans do wear well. There was Ernie Page, too. He won the 100 metres six years ago and yesterday afternoon he ran Holmes to inches when the latter won in 10.8sec.

Holmes carried off the double event, as I had tipped him to do. His 200 metres time was 21.6sec. with Richardson a good second.

Lancashire did itself proudly. In addition to Roberts and Holmes, Handley registered an unexpected triumph over our half-mile champion, Collyer, in the 800 metres. Collyer made all the running, with Sautre as the chief trouble on behalf of France. Collyer stayed off the Frenchman's final challenge up the straight, but was himself beaten by Handley, who came with a tremendous rush to win in 1min. 52.5 sec.

In the 5,000 metres Ward won by 12 yards from Lefebvre in 14min. 48.2sec. It was a very interesting Parker, our second stringer, had a stitch with two laps to go, and Ward had to battle it out with the two Frenchmen.

The crowd cheered their men on frantically, but Ward never altered his beautiful stride and refused to be disturbed. In the last 800 yards he came away, and there was no doubt about the result.

I must not forget the good work carried on in the hurdles by Thornton, who beat Mattheotte, the Frenchman, in 15sec. dead. White, the Army man, was timed to do 15.4sec., the same as Mattheotte, but he hit his last hurdle and on the finer discrimination of the judges just lost second place.

The last event of the day was the relay. We had already won the match, but there was plenty of excitement at the end. Britain's team of Alford, Holmes, Page and Roberts winning in 3min. 27.3sec., as compared with France's time—of 3min. 29.0sec.

BROWN SMASHES RECORD

A. G. K. Brown set up a new Canadian record for the quarter-mile when he won this event for Oxford and Cambridge in 48.4-10sec. during an athletic contest against an Eastern Canadian team at Montreal. Oxford and Cambridge won the match by 11 events to 2. Though he missed his train from London by three minutes and had an exciting rush to reach the ground in time for his race, J. V. Powell recorded a brilliant win for the London A. C. in the half-mile and gained the W. Alexander Cup for the best performance of the afternoon at the Birchfield Harriers' Diamond Jubilee meeting at Birmingham. Being his third victory in the race he won outright the "Ansell" Cup, but generously returned it to the promoting club to be put up as a perpetual trophy.

Prior to Powell's arrival at the ground Fred Wolf had gained 6 points for the L.A.C. in the Wadilove Trophy inter-club competition by finishing second to H. C. Wickerson (Hillegate) in the 100 yards and in the same position in the "quarter" to F. H. March, the Midland champion.

Ten teams competed in the two-mile team race won by Belgrave, with Birchfield second and Poly third. "Laffy" Hughes, of Reading, won by 25 yards from C. K. Allen (Hillegate) in 9min. 32.1-5sec., with R. W. Penny (Belgrave) third. Belgrave at their first appearance in the competition, led with L.A.C. with 12 points each for the Wadilove Trophy. Birchfield were third with 10 points.

Insurance A. A. regained the Champions Trophy with a total of 76 points at the City and Hospitals meeting, staged at Imber Court London Business Houses (holders) being runners-up with 55 points.

burn, for without his guiding hand the Australians failed, for the first time, to play as a team. They have run two and often three teams and in handicap polo they have swept the board. Their record of successes, the result of a carefully thought-out plan and the tremendous keenness of their captain, Mr. Keith Rous, is extraordinary, probably a record. It includes the King's Coronation Cup, the Rothmans Open Cup, the Rothmans Handicap Cup, the Bhopal Cup, the Sutton Smith Cup, the Rothmans Junior Championship, the Rothmans Nomination Challenge Cup, the Junior Colts Cup, the Novices Cup, the Clero Cup, the Ranelagh Handicap Cup, and the Open Cup and West Somerset Cup at Minehead.

And of the players themselves: an outstanding figure has been Mr. Gerald Baiding. He is a brilliant striker—"that's not a goal, it's an acute angled cannon ball." I heard said of an incredible shot of his from near the boards—a brilliant horseman and a splendid polo tactician. He has clearly been the brain of the Jaguars side, and to my mind where his predominance appears in his acute judgment of pace. Of the other first-flighters that artist in polo, Captain Hawk, has not always been at his best, but he has shown some surprisingly good polo: Captain Guinness excelled on two or three occasions. Hanut Singh was on the whole disappointing, and Mr. Hughes definitely so. Of the soldier players we probably did not see the best of Captain Bator or Captain Hinde, both splendid team leaders; while Captain Darnley showed the greatest promise and Mr. Horsburgh Porter and Mr. Hamilton Russell seemed the best of the subalterns. Actually the best game in the Inter-Regimental was the

JUST MISSES A WORLD RECORD

Before 50,000 wildly enthusiastic spectators, Sydney Wooderson, the English mile champion, broke both the British and the Scottish all-comers' records for three-quarters of a mile at the Rangers' F.C. sports in Glasgow on Aug. 7.

The Blackheath Harrier's time of 3 min. 0.9 sec. was only three-tenths of a second short of the world's record, which he would most assuredly have beaten but for the adverse effect of a miniature gale.

Records toppled over by this wonderful judge of running pace were Jack Lovelock's British figures of 3 min. 2.2sec., made at Stamford Bridge in 1932, and the Scottish all-comers' best of 3 min. 3.8sec., created by Ray Watson (U.S.A.) at the Rangers' sports in 1928.

Wooderson conceded starts as follows: R. H. Thomas (10), B. C. Eccles (12), F. Close (10), and E. E. Lansdale (21), while Bob Graham, the Scottish champion, accompanied him on the scratch mark.

HE HAD NO ONE TO PULL HIM OUT

It was afterwards agreed that the start should have been at least doubled.

Wooderson gained about eight yards on Lansdale in the first quarter-mile, the backmarker's time at this point being 58.2sec.

Round the next lap Wooderson made the opposition look insignificant, coming into the lead at the bell in 1min. 56.7sec. He should have had at least three men ahead of him to pull him out over the last quarter.

Out on his own, the champion swept round on to the back straight, and, moving freely down wind, reached the finishing "go" mark still inside his world-record schedule. All went well until he hit the home stretch, where the wind was blowing at its hardest.

Wooderson still had plenty of strength left, but his final 415ft. was a poor match for the gale, and he lost the vital fractions that separated his run from Ladamie's world's best of 3 min. 0.6sec.

BOWLS TOURNAMENT

Results Of 4th Round Singles Matches

The following games were played in the fourth round of the singles lawn bowls championship yesterday: G. H. Sherriff, of the Kowloon Bowling Green, created a mild surprise when he beat A. W. Grimmit, the 1934 triple title holder, by a convincing score of 21 to 10 on the 19th head. On the Police green.

A. R. Dallah, Indian bowler who on Monday beat A. E. Coates (elder), fell down to S. Randle, of the Civil Service, 21 to 19. It took them 21 heads to decide the winner.

U. M. Omar, a former champion, defeated T. Armstrong, of the Kowloon Bowling Green Club, 23 to 10 on the 25th head at the Kowloon C.C. green. The match between A. S. Russell and J. Cook was not played.

At the Kowloon B.C.C. H. A. Alves, of the Club de Recreo, beat H. Overy, of the Kowloon C.C. 23 to 10 on the 26th head, and on the same green L. F. Xavier defeated J. V. Ramsey 21 to 20 in an exciting game which took 27 heads to decide.

Twelfth versus Tenth affair in the first round at Tidyouth. The substitutes' final showed more individual brilliance on the part of the 12th Lancer team than the final of the Inter-Regimental itself.

Of the young players only two stand out as possible internationals. Mr. Skene, who may well be forgotten as I believe he is not to appear in London polo next year, is clearly an international No. 1. And Mr. Lakin, given a season in America or India, might train up to play behind him. One can only hope that they will get more chances than our seven weeks' season normally affords.

PLANES GUARD CANTON

City Considered
Well Defended

Canton, August 24.
With the arrival of a new squadron of Nanking aircraft a few days ago, and two more squadrons expected to arrive from Kwangsi in one or two days, Canton feels more secure against air attacks now.
The local air force headquarters was officially informed to-day by the Kwangsi Government that it had been instructed by the Central Government to send two air squadrons to Canton in view of the persisting rumours that the Japanese are ready to carry out air raids on this city.
According to a Government spokesman to-day, the city is quite safe now that the Nanking planes have been set up at strategic points. Even some of the high buildings utilised have been for anti-aircraft runs.
The spokesman added that if two more air squadrons arrive from Kwangsi the total strength of the forces will not only be sufficient to guard the city but will be able to carry out defence patrols along the whole of the provincial coast.—Wah Kiu Yat Po.

Big Increase Shown
In Britain

London, Aug. 26.
An increase of over 12 per cent. in the yield of Income Tax last week, compared with the corresponding week of 1936, is a feature of the Exchequer returns, which show that total ordinary revenue amounts to £245,004,532, compared with £236,225,519 at the corresponding date of last year. The week's total ordinary revenue, at £17,352,468, was £643,468 in excess of the total for the corresponding week in last year.

Total expenditure, less self-balancing items, was £322,311,833, compared with £309,340,012 at the corresponding date of 1936.
Floating debt outstanding on August 21 was £284,535,000, which shows an increase of £135,405,000 since March 31 and compares with £223,225,000 in August, 1936.—British Wireless.

Torrelavega Surrenders

Torrelavega, Aug. 24.
The insurgent armies, under General Francisco Franco, entered Torrelavega, 11 miles south-west of Santander, to-day. The last of the great Basque seaports, Santander is expected to fall within 48 hours, releasing thousands of insurgent troops for fighting elsewhere.

A brigade of Navarre Monarchists first occupied Torrelavega.

Earlier messages stated that two insurgent columns were within 12 and 18 miles of Santander respectively, and that a third was within 16 miles of the main objective of the present drive. Apparently the advance was meeting with little resistance.

Both sides reported aerial activity and claimed to have shot down several planes.

Futile Hunt For Work

Roosevelt Cannot Help Marchers

Washington, Aug. 24.
The Government can give no help to the Workers' Alliance.
To-day 2,500 bedraggled men, women and children encamped on the mud flats near the Lincoln Memorial for the past 48 hours, delivered a letter to President Roosevelt, asking him to use his executive powers to reinstate former W. P. A. workers who could not find private employment. The whole party marched through the capital streets in an orderly procession, four abreast, waving the blue Workers' Alliance flags and singing their union songs, on the way to the White House.
An automobile halted the marchers in their way, however, and diverted them to the Labour Department auditorium where they heard a message from the President.
"I regret it is not within our power to grant your request."
The marchers plan to disperse to their homes.—United Press.

SERVANT STEALS SUITINGS

Appearing before Mr. S. F. Balfour at the Central Magistracy this morning, Ng Yuen, aged 30, shop assistant, was charged on two counts of larceny by servant of 2½ yards of grey weed suiting on August 21, and 5½ yards of similar cloth on August 24, from No. 4 D'Aguiar Street.
Detective-Sergeant D. Davies said defendant's master, Ahmed Din, returned to the shop yesterday which he had noticed on the counter the previous night had disappeared. He suspected defendant, and informed the police, and Chinese detective C270 was sent to the shop to make enquiries. He questioned defendant, who denied stealing the cloth, but eventually admitted taking it, and took the detective to a scavenging lane at the back of the shop, where 5½ yards of the cloth was recovered from underneath a stone step.
Defendant had cut off 2½ yards from the roll, and had pawned it for $3 at the Yuen On pawnshop. The cloth was very expensive, added the Sergeant, being real English tweed, and was worth $14 a yard. The value of the roll was $115.50.
Defendant denied the second charge, saying he was about to return it to the shop after hiding it, but after evidence had been given, he was convicted, and sentenced to two months' hard labour on each charge, the sentences to run concurrently.
